Defending the Homeland:
Counter-terrorism and the Law
I AM PLEASED TO PRESENT THE WINTER ISSUE of the IU Law–Indianapolis Alumni Magazine and Dean’s Report. The fall semester has been a busy one at the law school, as this magazine attests. In the following pages, you will read about the groundbreaking counter-terrorism simulation that took place at the school in October as part of Professor Shawn Boyne’s Seminar in National Security Law. During the simulation, students played the roles of government officials responding to simulated terrorist attacks across the country and right here in Indianapolis. In January, WFYI, the local PBS affiliate, will air a documentary about this event.

The magazine also includes information about the new legal clinic in Eldoret, Kenya, that our school has helped to establish and continues to support. I had the honor of visiting the clinic in October and am in awe of what has been accomplished there in a very short time.

You will also read about and see photos of the recent Board of Visitors Reception at the school, hosted by law school alumnus, and former U.S. Vice President, Dan Quayle. We had a packed house for the event that brought many friends back to the school to visit and reminisce.

I also want to take a moment to remember our beloved Professor Mary Harter Mitchell, whose sudden and untimely passing in November of this year leaves a tremendous void in our law school family. We include a tribute to Professor Mitchell in this magazine as well.

You will also note that the issue incorporates our annual Dean’s Report, recognizing the generosity of those many individuals who support the school financially. We are grateful to our alumni and friends who help to make so many of our educational programs possible. We thank you for your ongoing support of the school and look forward to partnering with you in the coming year.

Alumni Publication and Programming Awards

In October, the law school’s alumni magazine, IU Law—Indianapolis received a Gold MarCom Award from the Association of Marketing and Communication Professionals for the summer 2009 issue, “The School that Never Sleeps.” The magazine is produced by the law school’s Office of Institutional Advancement in cooperation with the IU Law Alumni Association. It is edited by Jonna Kane MacDougall, ’86 and Elizabeth Allington.

The Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) presented the 2009 Pride of CASE V Silver Award for the Best Student Alumni Programming to the IU School of Law—Indianapolis Alumni Association for “Operation L.A.W.S. (Law Alumni Working with Students).” Operation L.A.W.S. is a mock-interview program designed to prepare students for the transition into life after graduation and to introduce them to the variety of career paths available for today’s legal professionals. A special thank you to all alumni who volunteered and participated in the program! Congratulations to Danny Kibble, director of alumni programs, and Chasity Thompson, Assistant Dean for Professional Development, who created the program.

Bepko Receives Chancellor’s Medal

CHANCELLOR EMERITUS GERALD L. BEPKO was recognized with the Chancellor’s Medal at the IUPUI 40th Anniversary Breakfast on September 23. At the same event Chancellor Charles Bantz presented the Chancellor Emeritus Bepko sculpted personal bust, mounted on a pedestal, which has now been placed in the IUPUI University Library. Other 40th Anniversary recipients of the Medal are Senator Richard Lugar, former state Senator and Lt. Governor John Mutz, former state Senator Larry Borst, former state Senator Dr. Ned Lamkin and former City-County Council President Rozelle Boyd.

A former law school faculty member, Bepko served as Dean of the school from 1981 until he was appointed Chancellor in 1986. He was Chancellor of IUPUI and IU Vice President for Long Range Planning until 2002. In 2003, he served as Interim President of Indiana University.

As Chancellor, Bepko led a movement to unify the various programs of IUPUI, academically and geographically, by bringing all schools to the West Michigan Street campus and presiding over the construction of more than 20 buildings. During his tenure as chancellor, enrollment grew by nearly 25 percent and external support for faculty activities grew from $38 million in 1986 to more than $200 million in 2001-02.

Ida Coleman Lamberti, ’92 Receives Randall T. Shepard Award

IDA COLEMAN LAMBERTI, ’92, received the Randall T. Shepard Award for excellence in Pro Bono Publico during the 2009 Randall T. Shepard Award Dinner on Friday, November 6 at the Hyatt Regency in Indianapolis. Lamberti has been a dedicated volunteer at the Neighborhood Christian Legal Clinic (NCLC) in Indianapolis for years. She currently works with the Burmese refugee population, assisting refugees with immigration cases for NCLC. She donated more than 750 hours in 2008 alone. According to NCLC administrators, Lamberti’s volunteer time makes a tremendous impact on NCLC’s refugee caseload, making it possible for NCLC to serve vastly more low income families in need. The Shepard Award Dinner is sponsored by the Indiana Bar Foundation and the Indiana Pro Bono Commission.

Professor Cynthia Baker Named to Indiana’s Commission for Higher Education

INDIANA GOVERNOR MITCH DANIELS recently appointed the law school’s Cynthia Baker, Clinical Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Program on Law and State Government, to the Indiana Commission for Higher Education (ICHE). The Commission helps to plan and coordinate Indiana’s state-supported system of postsecondary education, focusing primarily on public higher education, but also considering issues regarding K-12 standards and testing, the Education Roundtable, Department of Workforce Development efforts, and the State Student Assistance Commission of Indiana.

Professor Baker joined the law school in 1997 as the first Director of the Program on Law and State Government (PLSG). Under her leadership, the PLSG has substantially expanded experiential learning opportunities for students interested in the confluence of law and state government. Baker currently serves on the executive committee of the government practice section of the Indianapolis Bar Association and as a co-chair of the state administrative law committee of the ABA’s Section of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice. She also has served several appointments as a member of Indiana’s Code Revision Committee. Before joining the law school, Baker was a section chief of the Indiana Department of Environmental Management’s (IDEM’s) Office of Legal Counsel.

John T. Neighbours, ’74 Receives Whistler Award from Mayor Ballard

ON OCTOBER 27, John T. Neighbours received the 2009 Charles L. Whistler Award, an honor given by the Indianapolis Mayor’s Office in collaboration with the Greater Indianapolis Progress Committee (GIPC). The award recognizes individuals who, outside the regular duties of their profession, have brought together the public and private sectors for civic improvement in Indianapolis. A partner at Baker & Daniels, Neighbours serves on the executive committee of the Greater Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce and the board of the United Way of Central Indiana, where he is the immediate past president. The founding board chair of the Charles A. Tindley Accelerated Learning High School, Neighbours is co-chair of the Legal Committee of Super Bowl XLVI; co-chair of the Central Indiana Transit Task Force, and a member of the boards of the Indianapolis Zoological Society and the Christian Theological Seminary. He served as vice president of the Indiana Sports Corporation and has held positions on the boards of the Indianapolis Symphony, the DePauw University Board of Visitors, and the Marion County Commission on Youth, just to name a few. In addition, he was the management-side editor of The Developing Labor Law (Fourth Edition), a principal treatise in America on traditional labor law topics.

Law School Professor, Alumnus Participate in Health Care Reform Panel

ON NOVEMBER 10, 2009, Professor David Orentlicher and Representative Mike Pence, ’86 participated in a Health Care Reform Panel hosted by Ball State University. Professor Orentlicher is the Samuel R. Rosen Professor of Law and co-director of the Hall Center for Law and Health. He is also a former member of the Indiana House of Representatives. Congressman Mike Pence represents Indiana’s 6th Congressional district, and is currently serving his 5th term in office. He also was elected unanimously by House Republicans to serve as House Republican Conference Chairman in November 2008. Other panelists included Dr. Thomas Whiteman, Otolaryngologist, representative to the Indiana State Medical Association; Mr. Larry Dust, CEO, Key Benefit Administrators; and Professor Cecil Bohanan, Professor of Economics, Ball State University. Dr. Charles Taylor, Ball State University Professor of Political Science moderated the event. Each panelist explained his perspective on health care reform and the audience was invited to ask questions.

South American Delegation Visits Law School

ON SEPTEMBER 25, the IU School of Law–Indianapolis hosted a delegation of lawyers, judges, law professors, constitutional scholars, ministry officials and journalists from a dozen South American countries. The U.S. State Department sponsored the visit to help these officials examine the U.S. civil, criminal, military and juvenile justice systems and explore legal education and the practice of law.

The program included discussions on a range of topics, such as judicial case management, alternative dispute resolution, arbitration, mediation, plea bargaining, trial by jury, juvenile justice, the civil rights movement, affirmative action, family law, domestic violence, human rights, judicial activism and indigenous dispute resolution. It also focused on legal education for foreign students and officials in the U.S. The proceedings were conducted in Spanish with interpretation.

The event was co-sponsored by the Meridian International Center, the International Center of Indianapolis and the law school’s Program in International Human Rights Law, which is directed by Professor George Edwards.

Shown above is the delegation, along with law school Professors George Edwards, María Pabón López and Eleanor DeArman Kinney.
Defending the Homeland:
COUNTER-TERRORISM and the Law
At approximately 9:00 a.m. on Friday, October 23, 2009, news reports circulated throughout the law school that the Pakistani Embassy in Washington, D.C. had been bombed.

In the Wynne Courtroom, the President of the United States was just coming to terms with this situation when, moments later, it was reported that a “dirty bomb” had exploded in downtown Indianapolis—near Lucas Oil Stadium. The governor and the mayor immediately attempted to obtain more information as they jockeyed for position scheduling press conferences in the press room in the Conour Atrium. In short, it was not “business as usual” at Inlow Hall.

Approximately 50 students played various roles from the President, to governmental staffers, to reporters covering the story as it unfolded. With help from realistic news broadcasts, courtesy of Scott Sander at WISH-TV, as well as “top secret” intelligence injects supplied by Professor Boyne and real-life national security experts, the students were forced to make split-second decisions regarding events as they happened. The story played out in seven distinct areas of Inlow Hall, and all of the action was recorded in each room and broadcast via a simulation “dashboard” that was live on the law school’s website. More than 200 people outside the school followed the events taking place in real time via the website.

“My hope in putting together the simulation was to help students to realize how important it is for government officials to structure their decision-making within the framework of the law,” said Professor Boyne. “In the weeks leading up to the simulation, we discussed key background issues related to counter-terrorism, including how to define terrorism, the motivations of terrorists, the findings of the 9/11 Commission, and how to respond to terrorism within the frameworks of criminal law, as well as the law of armed conflict,” she added.
“Although our nation has made great strides in improving homeland security in the wake of 9/11, substantial problems remain. The most significant is getting immense government bureaucracies with their own distinctive organizational cultures to work together. While students may begin to understand that problem by reading case studies and articles, perhaps the most effective way to learn about organizational challenges is to create a learning environment in which students experience those challenges firsthand,” she said.

IT WAS “DAUNTING” TO BE THE PRESIDENT
Third-year student Daniel Cicchini played the role of President of the United States. “To prepare for the simulation, I read and re-read our assigned material about on-the-ground responses to 9/11 and how state and local governments responded to the attack. Professor Boyne recommended two books that I read over fall break, Terror Presidency: Law and Judgment Inside the Bush Administration, and Essence of Decision: Explaining the Cuban Missile Crisis. Those books helped me to appreciate different aspects of presidential decision-making and the impact of decisions on broader policy issues,” Cicchini said.

“It was daunting to be the President during a terrorist attack. There were eight people in the ‘White House’ during the simulation and everybody offered me information and advice on all of the issues occurring simultaneously….One of the participants in the White House was the General Counsel to the President, who offered regular reminders regarding the limits of executive authority while we responded.

“I learned about the importance of teamwork and being able to rely on that team. My natural reaction was to want to be involved in everything to best understand and lead, but it was impossible. Delegating tasks to other participants in the White House enabled us to address many more issues much more efficiently. The simulation was a great experience,” he said.

GOVERNOR DEALS WITH STATE/FEDERAL COMMUNICATION ISSUES Third-year student James Baldwin played the role of the Governor of Indiana. As part of the simulation, he received word that the Lieutenant Governor had been kidnapped. “During the morning, conflict developed between the State of Indiana and the federal government. In one instance, the President announced in his press conference that ‘we’ had rescued the kidnapped Lieutenant Governor. The Vice President had asked me not to tell the press about the Lieutenant Governor’s kidnapping and that the Indiana State Police had rescued her. I had a teleconference with the President where I expressed my extreme unhappiness that he had not mentioned State efforts in his press conference and made the State look dependent on the federal government to keep us safe,” he said.

“The most important thing I learned about decision-making in the executive branch is how much is out of the executive’s control. Conflicting information comes in rapidly, and it is difficult to discern what to act on and when.

“I’m so grateful to have been a part of the simulation. It was probably the most fun I have had in law school, and it is certainly the most memorable event I have participated in thus far.”

BEING THE MAYOR OF INDIANAPOLIS WAS STRESSFUL Third-year student Joshua McMahan played the role of Mayor of Indianapolis. “To prepare for the role of mayor, I studied the Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan for Marion County. I tried to understand how the different agencies interact and what my role was in terms of who I needed to contact and what I needed to do to respond. I was mainly concerned with the initial response,” he said.

One of the situations facing McMahan as Mayor of Indianapolis was the aftermath of the dirty bomb attack—and the resulting air and water contamination. “The experience was very stressful because I was being flooded with phone calls and questions. I had to consider issues such as keeping the public calm and spinning the situation in a way that was truthful, yet not conducive to spreading mass panic throughout the city. I have a new level of respect for people who deal with such situations. I also learned that communication and coordination are the most essential aspects of effective response.”

U.S. AMBASSADOR INTERACTS WITH OFFICIALS

Third-year student Hattie Harmon was the U.S. Ambassador to Israel. “Prior to the simulation, I studied a great deal of information regarding the role of ambassadors and their function within the State Department. Additionally, I read everything I could find about Israel’s historical and current internal and external relationships. For me, preparing for the simulation was more difficult than preparing for a final examination because the parameters for what we might encounter in the simulation were less defined than they are for a final exam, so I felt the need to study very broadly,” she said.

“It was one thing to imagine what the situation might be like; it was quite another to actually confront such a fluid situation and deal with the other actors in ‘real time.’ As Ambassador, I had to consider the different levels of information that I could share with different people—for instance, I wouldn’t necessarily want to share the same information with both the Israeli Prime Minister’s representative and the CIA Tel Aviv Station Chief.

“I learned a tremendous amount about the current status of the Arab-Israeli conflict, the actors involved, and the roles of other world states and organizations in the conflict,” she added.

PROFESSOR BOYNE PLEASED WITH THE OUTCOME

Professor Boyne praised her students and the fact that they took their roles in the simulation so seriously. “The students did a fantastic job,” she said. “The positive feedback that they received on their performance from our on-site counter-terrorism experts—who came from as far away as Europe and the Middle East—underscores the strong tradition that our law school enjoys in training students to assume leadership positions in government, non-profit organizations and the legal profession.”

The law school would like to thank all of the sponsors and partners who were involved in the planning and execution of the simulation event: The IU School of Public and Environmental Affairs; the Center for the Study of Global Change; the IUPUI Office of Emergency Preparedness; Marion County Emergency Management; the IU School of Liberal Arts Communication Technology Laboratory; IUPUI for its 40th Anniversary Celebration Funding; the IUPUI University Information and Technology Services’ Media Design and Production Office; the IUPUI Multimedia Production Center of the Division of Student Life; the IUPUI Mathematics Assistance Center; WISH-TV, Channel 8; and WFYI Indianapolis.

WFYI DOCUMENTARY

A documentary about the simulation exercise has been produced by WFYI in Indianapolis and will air on that station on January 21, 2010 at 7:30 p.m. The law school thanks WFYI for partnering on this project.
Eldoret, Kenya. In a small room at the AMPATH Centre here, Jane nervously eyed the visitors from Indiana, smoothed her long black and white skirt, and launched into her story.

“I am a rape survivor,” she said in Kiswahili-accented English. “I was assaulted by my uncle in March, and I ended up being HIV-positive.” Tears filled her eyes, but she continued to speak. After the attack, Jane (not her real name) went to the hospital and then to the police. But in Kenya, corruption and gender discrimination cause most sexual assault cases to be dropped early in the process. The prosecutor in Jane’s case first ignored her, and then suggested she abandon the case.

“But then Milkah came to my aid, and she pushed things along in court,” Jane said, gesturing at Milkah Chepinga and smiling for the first time.
Cheptinga is the legal director of the Legal Aid Centre of Eldoret (LACE), which works in close association with AMPATH (The Academic Model for the Prevention and Treatment of HIV/AIDS), the Nobel Peace Prize-nominated health and poverty program in which Indiana University School of Medicine plays a central role. Cheptinga and volunteer Kenyan lawyers and law students represent low-income clients like Jane for free in cases involving issues including family disputes, gender-based violence, and estate matters.

Some LACE clients have been pushed off their land by greedy in-laws, some have been discriminated against because they are HIV-positive. Others have been left destitute and homeless after going without spousal support for young children. In all these areas of the law, most Kenyans have strong rights on paper yet no hope of enforcing those rights without an attorney.

The Hoosier visitors listening to Jane’s story were part of an October delegation of attorneys led by Indiana University School of Law-Indianapolis Dean Gary Roberts and Indiana Court of Appeals Judge Patricia Riley, ’74. Also in the delegation were Fran Quigley, ’87, a visiting professor at IU Law-Indianapolis and associate director of AMPATH; adjunct professor Larry Landis, ’73; Plews Shadley, Racher and Braun associate Theresa Willard, ’98, and NCAA attorney Jasmine Parson, ’08.

Riley and Quigley are co-founders of LACE, along with Kenyan attorneys Eric Gumbo and Moi University School of Law lecturer Vincent Mutai. Just as AMPATH is a partnership of physicians from Indiana and Kenya, LACE is a growing partnership between the legal communities of Indianapolis and Eldoret, with critical financial support coming from Indiana law firms, the Rotary Club of Indianapolis, and the Reuben Family Foundation.

One of the cornerstones of the partnership is the relationship between IU Law–Indianapolis and Moi University School of Law in Eldoret. Through the Program in International Human Rights Law, IU Law–Indianapolis students Aaron Stark and Matt Trick spent part of the summer of 2009 working at LACE, helping draft documents, interview clients, and prepare materials for community education on human rights.

PIHRL director, Professor George Edwards, also visited Eldoret and lectured on international human rights law to students and faculty at Moi School of Law. Moi’s Vincent Mutai is a Visiting Fellow at IU Law-Indianapolis’ Program in International Human Rights Law, and is exploring joint advocacy projects with Edwards and students from both schools.
IU School of Law–Indianapolis has begun providing an annual Master of Laws scholarship to a promising Moi Law graduate who promises to work in the LACE clinic after receiving their IU degree.

“We are pleased to be playing a role in helping to sustain the flow of well-trained attorneys working in this important program,” Dean Roberts told a gathering of local magistrates and law professors in Kenya.

LACE volunteer and 2008 Moi Law graduate Avril Rua is the first recipient of the LACE Scholarship and will begin her LL.M. studies in Indianapolis in January. Rua plays a key role in the representation of clients like Jane, and looks forward to applying what she learns in the IU Law–Indianapolis human rights law curriculum for the benefit of LACE clients. “I have already made so many Indiana friends who are students visiting Kenya, so I am eager to go to their home university and further my studies,” Rua said.

In just its first year of operation and with a bare-bones, one-lawyer staff, LACE has already represented more than 200 clients, and helped most of them find justice. One of those success stories is Jane’s. LACE leaned on the once-reluctant prosecutor and helped Jane obtain medical evidence, so now her attacker is jailed and facing several serious charges. “I am so grateful to Milkah and LACE,” she said to the Indiana law delegation as she finished telling her story.

Now it was Milkah’s turn to smile. “Once the court sees that someone like Jane has an advocate on her side pushing hard, things start to move the right way.”

The Indiana lawyers nodded in understanding. As IU and Moi students, faculty and alumni are learning, some principles of legal advocacy hold true in the U.S. and Kenya alike.

For those interested in supporting LACE, information about how to donate can be obtained at www.ampathkenya.org/lace.html, or by contacting Fran Quigley at quigley2@iupui.edu or 274-8057.
The sixth annual Jordan H. and Joan R. Leibman Forum on the Legal and Business Environment of Art took place on Friday, September 25 at the Herron School of Art and Design at IUPUI. The program featured a panel discussion on the topic, "The Art of Hope," focusing on the establishment of the Imani Workshops in Eldoret, Kenya.

The Imani Workshops were established in January 2005 as a branch of the Family Preservation Initiative under the IU–Kenya Partnership’s AMPATH program. The Academic Model for the Prevention and Treatment of HIV/AIDS (AMPATH) is a working model of urban and rural HIV prevention and treatment services in the public sector of Kenya. AMPATH currently cares for more than 60,000 HIV infected adults and children in Western Kenya. The Imani Workshops are a revenue-generating social enterprise focused on producing high quality crafts by HIV+ artisans in western Kenya.

The featured speaker at the Leibman Forum was Evaline Njoki, one of the first clients at the Family Preservation Initiative (FPI), and now a manager for the Imani Workshops. She spoke about the profound effect the FPI and workshops have had on her life. While in the U.S., she traveled widely, visiting gift shops, teaching students and also learning skills to take back to Kenya.

Also on the panel was Peter Park, who served in Kenya as AMPATH’s associate field director for FPI from 2003-06. Park helped to launch the Imani Workshops in 2005. “Thousands have benefited from the AMPATH program. Through the Imani Workshops, we have been able to provide a hand up and not a hand out. Fair Trade Certification guarantees a reasonable standard of living for those who have participated in the workshops,” he said.

Other panelists for the evening included Susan Buck Sutton, IU Associate Vice President for International Affairs; Dr. Bob Einterz, co-founder and director of the IU-Kenya Partnership; Sam Carpenter, general manager of Global Gifts; Carole Darst, chair of the Rotary of Indianapolis World Community Service Committee; Elsie Rotich, community outreach coordinator for the IU-Kenya Partnership, and Barbara Zech, art educator with Very Special Arts Indiana and Imani Workshop volunteer. The panel was moderated by WTHR producer, Deshong Perry.

The Jordan H. and Joan R. Leibman Forum was established at IUPUI in 2004 to examine issues related to the legal and business environment of the arts, and is a joint project of the IU Kelley School of Business Indianapolis, the IU School of Law–Indianapolis, and the IU Herron School of Art and Design. This year, the program was also co-sponsored by the IU Office of International Affairs (OIA). Herron Professor Mark Richardson and Ian McIntosh, director of international partnerships with OIA, spearheaded the event.
On Saturday, July 11, 2009 graduation candidates, their families, school officials and program guests attended a commencement ceremony held in the Faculty Theater on the Cairo University campus. Following welcoming remarks by IU Dean Gary R. Roberts, Professor Dr. Frank Emmert, director of the Egypt project spoke about the program’s mission and introduced student speaker, Yasmine Hassan Mohamed Sadek Afifi. The President of Cairo University, Professor Dr. Hossam Kamel, also offered welcoming remarks.

The dean of the Faculty of Law of Cairo University, Professor Dr. Ahmed Awad Belal introduced commencement speakers: Minister Moushira Khattab, Minister of State for Family and Population of Egypt; and U.S. Ambassador Margaret Scobey, Ambassador to the Arab Republic of Egypt.

Minister Moushira Khattab, Minister of State for Family and Population of Egypt, is also a member of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child and the special representative of the President of Egypt on children's issues. Minister Khattab holds the position of Vice President of the International Bureau for Children's Rights and chairs both the National Committee and the Steering Committee of Middle East and North Africa on Violence Against Children. She holds an M.A. in International Relations from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a B.A. in political science from the Cairo University, Faculty of Economics and Political Science, where she currently is a Ph.D. candidate.

A career foreign service officer at the rank of Minister-Counselor, Ambassador Margaret Scobey was confirmed on March 14, 2009. In December 2003, she was confirmed as Ambassador to Syria and was recalled for consultations in February 2005, following the assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri. In addition to her service in Syria, Scobey served as Political Counselor in Baghdad in 2006-07, and Deputy Chief of Mission at the U.S. Embassy in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia from September 2001 through November 2003. She has also served as Director of Arabian Peninsula Affairs in the department of State and as Deputy Chief of Mission in Sanaa, Yemen. Born in Memphis, Tennessee, Scobey graduated with a degree in history from the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, where she also received a master's degree. She pursued doctoral studies in history at the University of Michigan.

Professor Dr. Moatasem El Gheriani, Alexandria University Faculty of Law and Egypt program faculty coordinator, and Professor Dr. Mohamed S. Abdel Wahab, Cairo University Faculty of Law and Egypt program faculty coordinator, introduced the LLM. candidates. Professor Dr. Frank Emmert performed the hooding ceremony, and Professor Jim Nehf, Associate Dean for Graduate Studies, awarded the diplomas.

These graduation candidates received an American style legal education, taught by the faculty and adjunct faculty of IU Law--Indianapolis in newly renovated facilities and with the same technology found in American law school classrooms, courtesy of funding received from USAID--Egypt.

The Indiana University School of Law--Indianapolis Master of Laws (LL.M.) degree program was offered to students at program sites located on the Alexandria and Cairo University Faculties of Law. Pursuant to a grant award from USAID–Egypt, the law school entered into formal agreements with both the Faculties of Law at Cairo and Alexandria University to offer the International and Comparative Law track of its LLM. Program (with a curricular emphasis in international business and commercial law) to qualified Egyptian nationals onsite in Egypt. Through these collaborative efforts, and the financial backing of USAID–Egypt, the IU School of Law–Indianapolis became the first U.S. law school to offer a graduate law degree program in the Middle East. The program expects to hold its next graduation ceremony in late spring 2010 for approximately 75 students.

According to project director, Professor Dr. Frank Emmert, graduates of the program are anticipated to play a significant role in on-going efforts to improve Egypt's overall economy and the legal system. “USAID is working with Egyptian officials to help ‘rewrite’ or modernize that country's legislation and government policies with a view toward the business sector,” he says.

In October, Indiana University School of Law–Indianapolis faculty and staff members traveled to Cairo, Egypt to kick off the Fall 2009 LLM–Egypt program orientation. Those participating included project director, Professor Frank Emmert, along with Sonja Rice, ’07, Egypt Program Director; Terri Cuellar, Director of Technology Services, and Jacob Manaloor, ’03, Assistant Director of Grant Administration. Sixty-five new students were accepted to the LLM. program in Cairo. The total active enrollment for the program is one hundred forty-one students. For more information about the Egypt Program, please visit: http://indylaw.indiana.edu/llm/egypt.htm.
Former Vice President Dan Quayle Addresses Alumni at Board of Visitors Reception

Former Vice President of the United States, Dan Quayle, ’74, provided an enthusiastic and inspiring rallying cry in support of his alma mater at the 2009 Board of Visitors Reception on October 15 in the Conour Atrium. Quayle reminisced about his days in law school and how he met his wife, Marilyn Tucker Quayle, ’74, while a student here. He also encouraged his fellow alumni to join him in support of IU Law–Indianapolis.

“We NEED TO BE AMBASSADORS OF THIS GREAT LAW SCHOOL,” QUAYLE SAID TO THE CROWD OF NEARLY 175 ALUMNI AND UNIVERSITY LEADERS. “I wasn’t aware that more than 50% of the lawyers in Indiana are graduates of our school. We need to let people know about the importance of this school and its impact on the state. We need to get out in support of the school, carrying its spirit, and letting people know how it provides excellent attorneys for Indiana and this country,” he added.

Quayle, who resides in Arizona, visited the school for the Board of Visitors Reception and dinner. The former U.S. Congressman, Senator and Vice President of the United States, currently serves as Chairman of Cerberus Global Investments, LLC, one of the world’s leading private investment firms.

Quayle is widely considered to have been one of the most active Vice Presidents in history. Only 41 when he was elected Vice President, he was the first member of his generation to hold one of the top political offices in the nation.

In his constitutional role as Vice President, he served as president of the United States Senate. On February 9, 1989, President Bush named Quayle head of the Council of Competitiveness, which worked to ensure U.S. international competitiveness in the 21st century. He made official visits to 47 countries and was chairman of the National Space Council. Since leaving public office, Quayle has authored three books: Standing Firm: A Vice-Presidential Memoir which was on the New York Times bestseller list for 15 weeks; The American Family: Discovering the Values that Make Us Strong; and Worth Fighting For.

“We need to tell the story of our school,” Quayle said. “We’ll take our marching orders from the dean,” he added, “and I hope you’ll join me in support of our alma mater.”

ON OCTOBER 2, THE LAW SCHOOL’S PROGRAM ON LAW AND STATE GOVERNMENT HOSTED ITS ANNUAL FELLOWSHIP SYMPOSIUM, which brought more than 80 attorneys and others to the school for presentations on the topic: “State Law and Energy Policy: Initiatives and Ideas Powering the Future.” This was the ninth PLSG symposium which is a project of the PLSG Fellows under the direction of Professor Cynthia Baker. This year’s Fellows were Elliott McKinnis and Olivia Fleming. The PLSG Fellowship Symposium has earned the reputation of being one of the most interesting programs at the school, and this year’s symposium was no exception.

The day started with a presentation by Professor Baker on “The Big Objectives & Fine Print of State Energy Policy.” The morning address by Doug Gotham, director of the State Utility Forecasting Group, focused on “Powering the Future: A Forecast of Indiana’s Electricity Consumption, Prices and Resource Requirements.” The first Fellowship Address was presented by Elliott McKinnis and was entitled, “Mandating Renewable Energy through Legislation: An Analysis of State Renewable Electricity Standards.”

The morning panel featured a lively discussion on the topic, “Reacting to Nuclear Reactors: State Legislative Efforts Involving Nuclear Energy.” Panelists included Dr. Audeen Fentiman, Professor of Nuclear Engineering, Purdue University; Hon. Eric Koch, Indiana House of Representatives, District 65; Kerwin Olson, Program Director, Citizens Action Coalition of Indiana, and Charles Whitney, General Counsel, Oglethorpe Power Corporation.
The noon keynote address featured Nancy-ellen Zusman, Assistant Chief Counsel for Litigation and Regional Operations with the Federal Transit Administration, who gave an eye-opening overview of Indiana’s position in terms of mass transit efforts as compared with other states in the Midwest. Her talk was entitled, “Mass Transit in the Midwest: A Federal Perspective of State Efforts.”

The afternoon Fellowship Address by Olivia Fleming focused on the topic, “Does Mass Transit Equate to Energy Savings?” Her talk was followed by presentations by three graduate students in architecture from Ball State University. Design teams from Ball State developed conceptual plans for six potential light rail station transit development sites along the old Nickel Plate rail line running from downtown Indianapolis northeast to Noblesville. Each student designed a transit development either along the Nickel Plate rail line or another potential future transit line in Indianapolis. These urban design projects combined technology, climate responsive and energy producing architecture, mixed-use developments, and a “non-car-based urban lifestyle” in unique ways.

Nick Alexander’s project, “Green Community: Urban Agriculture + Transit,” focused on sustainability. In explaining his project, he commented, “Urban agriculture provides essential goods and services to dense populations within the city. In Indianapolis, this effort begins by redefining 38th Street and Fall Creek as a major transit-oriented community along the revitalized Nickel Plate line. The development in my project is designed as a dense community with a new mode of life: urban farming along... the rail line. A new transit hub distributes people and food, greenways connect the neighborhood with other Indianapolis communities, and the valley itself is used for community gardening.”

Architecture student Paul Konwinski created “Hydro-city,” explaining, “Hydro-city...focuses on the use of Fall Creek, a water feature adjacent to the Indiana State Fairgrounds. Hydro-city relies on the filtering, cleansing, and redistribution of the creek's water; restoration of the natural landscape, and the connections to the urban fabric of downtown Indianapolis. Rejuvenated neighborhoods are designed around different aquatic ecosystems such as wetlands and beaches.”

The third project, by Matt VanSoest, was titled: “The Yin and Yang: Transit Development” and proposed a design for 56th Street and Keystone Avenue. “A lake, a private oasis to lake cottages and mansions, is integrated into the new development through a canal/wetlands system. In return, the existing residences can benefit through the design's parks, infrastructure, and spaces which complete the “Yin and Yang” exchange,” he said.

An afternoon panel discussion on “Mass Transit Development and Energy Policy in Indiana,” featured Professor Harry Eggink, of the Ball State University College of Architecture and Planning; Professor Dan Cole, the R. Bruce Townsend Professor at the law school; Hon. Terri Austin, Indiana State Representative, District 36; Philip Roth, Assistant Director of the Indianapolis Metropolitan Planning Organization and Ehren Bingamen, Executive Director of the Central Indiana Regional Transportation Authority.
NEARLY 150 PEOPLE ATTENDED THIS YEAR’S ANNUAL FALL CLE PROGRAM WHICH TOOK PLACE ON OCTOBER 13 IN THE WYNNE COURTROOM. This year’s program was entitled “Corporate Integrity—Meeting Challenges and Doing the Right Thing.” This was the ninth year for this all-day event which raises money for the law school’s scholarship fund. To date, the annual event has raised more than $100,000 in student financial aid.

The morning session covered Corporate Integrity Issues and the presenters included legal professionals from around the country including Howard J. Young, Partner, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, LLP; Thomas M. Gallagher, Partner, Pepper Hamilton LLP; and Debra Wong Yang, Partner, Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP. After lunch, Professor María Pabón López from the IU School of Law–Indianapolis gave the “Indiana Ethics Update.” After Professor López, a panel discussed “Privacy and Ethics of Medical Information Governance,” with Professor Fred Cate, IU Maurer School of Law; Professor Eric Meslin, Director, IU Center for Bioethics; and Stan Crosley, Chief Privacy Officer, Eli Lilly and Company, each presenting their views and taking questions. The program wrapped up with a session on “Preemption and Beyond: Legal Issues Changing the FDA,” presented by Professor Ralph Hall, Distinguished Professor and Practitioner, University of Minnesota School of Law.

On October 13, the Wynne Courtroom was nearly full. Attorneys from Indiana and across the nation attended this year’s program.
More Students and Recent Graduates
Securing Judicial Clerkships

JUDICIAL CLERKSHIPS ARE AMONG THE MOST PRESTIGIOUS AND COMPETITIVE EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES AVAILABLE TO RECENT GRADUATES. Judges get to select from the cream of the crop, from many law schools, when choosing students and recent graduates to become their clerks. IU School of Law—Indianapolis students and alumni are seeking and finding clerkships after graduation in increasing numbers. According to Chasity Thompson, ’02, Assistant Dean for Professional Development, “To increase the number of our students accepting judicial clerkships was a personal goal. We have exceptional students, and I am elated to witness more of our students pursuing and accepting clerkship opportunities.”

Usually lasting one to two years, a judicial clerkship is an excellent way to bridge the gap between law school and the practice of law. Clerks at all court levels obtain unparalleled access to and knowledge about the judicial process. Additionally, a judicial clerk is exposed to a wide array of legal issues and is able to make a hands-on contribution to the judicial decision-making process. This experience and perspective is attractive to future legal employers who hire former judicial clerks for their significant legal knowledge, insider view of the court system, and ability to view cases from the court’s perspective. A judicial clerkship can provide a significant edge in the legal job market not only because of increased knowledge of the law and court system, but because of the valuable contacts and personal relationships developed during the clerkship experience.

Professor Joel M. Schumm, ’98, who spent the three years after graduation in judicial clerkships, first with the Honorable Theodore R. Boehm of the Indiana Supreme Court and then the Honorable Paul D. Mathias of the Indiana Court of Appeals, says, “Many of our faculty did one or more judicial clerkships and know what an invaluable experience it is. We often talk with students one-on-one to explain and encourage them to apply for clerkships.”

Professor Schumm directs the law school’s Judicial Externship Program and has served as a member or chair of the faculty clerkship committee since his appointment to the faculty. He says, “The Judicial Externship Program also gives students an opportunity to do the same work as a judicial clerk. For many students, this experience has created or solidified an interest in doing a clerkship. For some, it has created a contact or reference that helped secure that clerkship.”

“Clerking is a tremendous way of rounding off your legal education,” says Professor Jeffrey Cooper. “In law school, you tend to view the law in discrete parts; clerkships give you a chance to see the bigger picture, to see how those parts fit together, while still remaining focused on resolving individual disputes. I learned a tremendous amount about the law and about the judiciary during my clerkships, and that knowledge made me a better beginning lawyer than I would have been if I had gone right from law school into practice.” Professor Cooper clerked for the Honorable Louis H. Pollak of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania for a year after graduation from law school and for the Honorable Guido Calabresi of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit for one year after he had been in practice for two years.

Dean Thompson assists students with navigating the judicial clerkship process. Because she worked as a judicial clerk to Chief Justice Randall T. Shepard of the Indiana Supreme Court for two years, Thompson understands the benefits of a clerkship and encourages students to consider the opportunity and its long-term benefits. “A clerkships affords recent graduates the opportunity to further explore diverse areas of law while honing research and writing skills. Judicial clerks receive an invaluable perspective on the court system and develop insight into how to better analyze legal issues,” says Thompson. “Our office provides programming to expose students to the judicial clerkship process for federal and state opportunities, resource guides, personal counseling, mock interviews, reviews of application packets, and financial assistance with mailing applications. Additionally, we serve as the conduit between the students and the federal clerkship hiring system. We continue to cultivate relationships with members of the judiciary, many of whom are quite supportive of programming and networking events hosted by our office. The clerkship experience will be beneficial and memorable for our students.”

Alumni who held judicial clerkships following graduation are encouraged to contact Dean Thompson to assist the Office of Professional Development in cultivating additional clerkship opportunities. The office phone number is 317-274-2484.
Current students and recent graduates who have secured judicial clerkships include:

Chief Justices Discuss Issues
On September 9, the law school and the American Constitution Society co-sponsored The Counsel of Chiefs: An Open Discussion of State Supreme Court Chief Justices and the Challenges of State Courts of Last Resort. The event featured (left to right) Chief Justice Thomas J. Moyer, Supreme Court of Ohio; Former Chief Justice Laura Denir Sith, Supreme Court of Missouri; Chief Justice Randall T. Shepard, Indiana Supreme Court; and Professor Cynthia A. Baker, Director of the Program on Law and State Government. In addition to discussing issues such as access to justice, regulation of the legal profession, relations with the executive and legislative branches and addressing crises like foreclosure, drugs and immigration, the panel also took questions from the audience.

Indiana Court of Appeals
On September 23 the Indiana Court of Appeals heard oral arguments in the law school’s Wynne Courtroom as part of the court’s “Appeals on Wheels” program. The three-judge panel included Judge Patricia A. Riley, ’74; Judge James S. Kirsch, ’74; and Judge Paul D. Mathias. After the argument, the judges took questions from the audience, which consisted primarily of law students.
THE INDIANA UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW—INDIANAPOLIS HOSTED A VARIETY OF EVENTS FOR STUDENTS AS WELL AS THE PUBLIC AS PART OF ITS FIRST-EVER “DIVERSITY WEEK,” OCTOBER 5-8, 2009. The school’s Diversity Committee, which is made up of students, faculty and staff, is chaired by Professor María Pabón López and co-chaired by Tamara McMillian, Associate Director of Professional Development.

Assistant Dean for Student Affairs, Matt Banker, says the group “brings to the table a dynamic collection of perspectives.” According to Professor López, the committee had the idea to identify a week during the Fall semester when members of the law school community could share information and exchange ideas about their similarities and differences. “I think Diversity Week is useful to open the eyes of students, faculty, and staff at the law school about the many faces that comprise the legal profession,” she says. The committee also hopes the events will help to build relationships between the law school and the Indianapolis community. Assistant Dean Banker adds that they are seeking to “foster a sense of inclusiveness in the legal community.”

Hossein Fazilatfar, a Master of Laws (LL.M.) student who serves on the committee, says he sees the purpose of the week’s events as “celebrating and sharing our cultures, traditions, backgrounds, thoughts, and beliefs and, in sum, to celebrating our ‘diversity’ which we’re all proud of.” Anthony Pearson, President of the Black Law Student Association (BLSA) says, “diversity is less about a person’s color and more about their perspective. A diverse legal ecosystem adds unparalleled value in the way it allows the legal community to respond to the multifaceted issues encountered by a community or company.”

The four days of events included a Cultural Celebration Fair, a panel discussion on the nomination of Hon. Sonia Sotomayor to the United States Supreme Court, a Human Resources training workshop on “Diversity and Entering the Profession,” and a Poetry Slam, entitled “The Beauty of Struggle,” organized by BLSA.

“As the President of the Black Law Students Association, I view The ‘Beauty of Struggle’ Poetry Slam as an opportunity to reflect on the commonality of the struggles that we all face irrespective of our differences,” Pearson says. “The understanding that accompanies this reflection will hopefully allow us all to become better servants and leaders at home, at work, and in the community. I appreciate the efforts of the Diversity Committee, and I know that the Indianapolis community, our students, faculty, and staff were enriched by participating in Diversity Week.”

The week’s events culminated with a keynote lecture by former Indiana Supreme Court Justice Myra Selby.

The law school’s Black Law Students Association (BLSA) organized a Poetry Slam entitled “The Beauty of Struggle,” that took place in the Courtyard on October 6. The faculty and students who participated by reading poems they had written include: (front row) Professor Jennifer Drobac, Professor Joan Ruhtenberg, Katie Crebo (3L) and Anthony C. Pearson (3L, President of BLSA); (second row) the late Professor Mary Harter Mitchell, Kallie Dee McBride (3L), and Professor Eric Dannenmaier.

Professor María Pabón López participated in a panel discussion held during Diversity Week on the nomination of Sonia Sotomayor to the United States Supreme Court.
Law School Hosts Visitors From Brazil

From August 30 through September 5, Professor Lloyd T. (Tom) Wilson hosted eight visitors from the Faculdades Espírito Santenses (FAESA) law school in Vitória, Espírito Santo, Brazil. The trip was initiated by FAESA law professor Stella Emery Santana, who specializes in Environmental Law.

The delegation included the dean of the FAESA law school, two professors, four of the school’s top students, and a former state prosecutor. During their week in Indianapolis, the delegation attended four courses on the legal systems of the United States taught by Professor Wilson and were given a tour of the Baker and Daniels law firm, where Jackie Simmons discussed the firm’s focus on international law and business in Brazil.

Professor Wilson also arranged for the delegation to meet with leaders of all three branches of Indiana government. Chief Justice Randall T. Shepard of the Indiana Supreme Court spoke to the group in the Supreme Court Courtroom, and Judge Edward W. Najam, Jr. of the Indiana Court of Appeals (and Professor Wilson’s former law partner) met with them in the Court of Appeals Courtroom. Lt. Governor Becky Skillman received the group at her State House office, and Indiana Senators Phil Boots and Mike Delph, who is currently a third-year student at the law school, addressed the group as they sat at Senators’ desks in the Senate Chambers.

In addition to the cultural activities available in the capital city, the FAESA delegation was treated to a trip to Crawfordsville, where they addressed the faculty and students of Wabash College. Additionally, they attended an IU football game in Bloomington. “The law school was very pleased to have this opportunity to promote our school’s contacts with Latin America,” Professor Wilson says. “Hopefully we are setting the foundation for mutual faculty and student exchanges in the future.”
THE LAW SCHOOL’S PRO BONO PROGRAM, under the direction of LaWanda Ward, ’03, has organized a Pro Bono & Public Interest week in the Fall semester each year since 2002. The week is designed to provide law students with in-depth information about job search strategies in the public interest sector, panel discussions of student and attorney experiences, and an opportunity to interact with local partner agencies during the Pro Bono & Special Programs fair. This year’s Pro Bono & Public Interest week was held in conjunction with the American Bar Association’s National Pro Bono week, October 26-30.

Indiana Supreme Court Chief Justice Randal T. Shepard gave opening remarks for the attorney panel discussion on Tuesday, October 27 in the law school’s courtroom. The attorney panel included Monica Fennell, Executive Director, Indiana Pro Bono Commission; Dea Lott, ’08, staff attorney, Indiana Legal Services; Elizabeth Kiefner, ’03, Indiana Attorney General’s Office-Medical Licensing Section; John R. Maley, ’88, Partner and Pro Bono Chair, Barnes & Thornburg; Brita Horvath, ’02, Coordinator of Diversity and Pro Bono, Baker & Daniels; and Andy Campbell, ’05 Associate, Baker & Daniels. All students who attended this program earned one hour of pro bono service.

The agencies and programs represented at the Pro Bono Fair included the Neighborhood Christian Legal Clinic, the Indianapolis Bar Association’s Pro Bono Program, the Indiana Attorney General’s Office, the Marion County Prosecutor’s Office, Teen Court, Indiana Legal Services, the Indiana Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the law school’s Program on Law & State Government, the Chinese Law Summer Program, the European Law Summer Program, the Program in International Human Rights Law, and three of the law school’s Clinical Programs: Civil, Criminal Defense, & Disability.
Mayor Visits

Indianapolis Mayor Greg Ballard visited the law school on October 29 at the invitation of the school’s Environmental Law Society and the Environmental Policy Forum. He discussed the important environmental initiatives of his first term as Mayor, along with his future goals for the Indianapolis environment.

Lt. Col. David Benjamin Delivers Lecture

On Thursday, October 22, Lt. Col. (Res.) David Benjamin spoke in the Wynne Courtroom at the law school. His lecture, “Israel’s Fight Against Terrorism—The Charge of the Lawyer’s Brigade,” served as a preamble to the counter-terrorism program that took place at the school the following day. Lt. Col. Benjamin spent 17 years in the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) Military Advocate General Corps. From 2005 until his retirement, Lt. Col. Benjamin was Director of the Strategic and International Affairs Branch of the IDF International Law Department.

Alumni Serve Historic Harrison Home
By Alicia Carlson

How many lawyers does it take to fill the board of directors at the Benjamin Harrison Home? Sounds like a lame joke, but the truth is that five law school alumni currently sit on the governing board of the historic property at 1230 N. Delaware Street in Indianapolis.

HARRISON—LAWYER, U.S. SENATOR AND PRESIDENT—LIVED IN THE 16-room, Italianate-style home before his presidency in 1889, returning there in 1893 after his term in the White House ended. He continued to reside in the home until his death in 1901. It’s been a museum since 1974, and today attracts visitors with special exhibits, events and tours of where Harrison and his family lived, worked and campaigned.

It was during a recent board meeting that Robert Everitt, ’65, noticed the trend of IU Law–Indianapolis alumni serving on the board. At that meeting, board members Professor of Law Susanah Mead, ’76; John Krauss, ’76; Michael Peek, ’79; and Steven Campbell, ’97, were in attendance.

Everitt joined the board as a natural extension of a long-standing interest in historical homes and Indiana history. He recruited Mead, who knew the connection between Harrison and the IU School of Law–Indianapolis.

“Our law school was, at one time, the Benjamin Harrison Law School,” she notes.

The Benjamin Harrison Law School was a part-time evening school in Indianapolis at the turn of the 20th century. In 1936, it merged with the Indiana Law School, a full-time day school, until its affiliation with IU in 1944. Today, the IU School of Law–Indianapolis is the largest law school in Indiana and the only law school in the state to offer both full- and part-time programs, an important legacy from its early days as the Benjamin Harrison Law School.

The attorneys on the board are valued for their expertise on a variety of legal issues, according to Phyllis Geeslin, president and CEO of the Benjamin Harrison Home.

But law school alumni and their dedication to the home are also a fitting tribute to Harrison, who served as the first president of the Indiana Bar Association during his long and distinguished law career, she says.

“Benjamin Harrison was such a wonderful lawyer,” Geeslin says. “He is considered to be one of the best lawyers to occupy the White House.”
The Dean’s Report recognizes those generous alumni and friends who have supported the school financially during fiscal year 2008-2009. Donors to the law school are recognized in several ways, including membership in the Landmark Society, the Century Society, the Black Cane Society, the Maennerchor Society (all carrying the Partners in Progress Giving Designation), the Dean’s Council and the Law School Associates.

During the 2008-2009 fiscal year, gifts were received from 1,703 donors, totaling $799,994.44.

Our private fundraising is especially important because the law school is a state-assisted, not state-supported, institution. Private funds are crucial to create scholarships, to establish endowed professorships and faculty chairs, and to support our academic centers of excellence.

We wish to thank the alumni and friends, named in the following pages, who make it a priority to support our law school through their loyalty and generosity.

Elijah Lovejoy was a publisher and avid abolitionist during the antebellum era who died defending his printing press. An angry mob murdered Lovejoy in 1837 on the frontier of the American west in Alton, Illinois. Many consider Lovejoy to be the first martyr to freedom of the press in the United States. Lovejoy was a contemporary of Abraham Lincoln, who later selected Lovejoy’s younger brother John to serve as U.S. counsel to Peru. Another brother, Owen, served and died in the U.S. Congress during Lincoln’s presidency. Upon hearing the news of Owen’s death, Lincoln said: “Lovejoy was the only friend I had in Congress.”

DEAN’S REPORT
Law School Advice Remembered: Alumnus Wants to Pay It Forward—and Back

By Alicia Carlson

When Adam Arceneaux, ’93, was a law student, a professor made a prediction—and gave some advice. William F. Harvey, Carl M. Gray Professor of Law Emeritus, said that students would someday find themselves surrounded by stacks of files, facing deadlines and managing countless details.

“PROFESSOR HARVEY SAID TO NEVER FORGET THAT BEHIND EACH FILE IS A CLIENT FOR WHOM THAT PARTICULAR MATTER IS THE BIGGEST CONCERN AND GREATEST WORRY,” Arceneaux recalls. Those words made a big impact on Arceneaux, a partner in the Competitive Business Practice Litigation Group at Ice Miller LLP, although it’s far from the only lesson he learned.

“A legal education is a phenomenal experience,” he says. “The takeaway from law school is learning how to think and how to solve problems, regardless of your career path.”

An Indianapolis native who graduated from the IU Kelley School of Business in Indianapolis, Arceneaux was a fundraising consultant when he applied to law school. It felt a little like a gamble; he wasn’t sure he’d be successful, and his wife, Margaret, had to support the newly married couple on her salary.

He shouldn’t have worried. Arceneaux was an associate editor of the Indiana Law Review and graduated summa cum laude.

Today, his practice is in business litigation, which includes representing and advising clients in a variety of non-compete, contract and other business disputes. “I enjoy what I do,” he says. “I help solve people’s problems.”

Arceneaux’s relationship to the school continues. He’s a member of the board of directors and past president of the Alumni Association. For the past 10 years, Arceneaux has been the law school’s Law Firm Campaign chair at Ice Miller and he served on the steering committee of the capital campaign for the current building.

Giving helps pay back the investment in his legal education by Indiana taxpayers and donors, he says. Arceneaux remembers being awarded a $500 scholarship, a modest amount that made a big difference.

“It was from a donor I never met, and who never met me,” Arceneaux says.

The economic reality for today’s law school students is tougher than when he began clerking at Ice Miller in 1991, so giving is also a way of “paying it forward,” Arceneaux adds.

“Law students need our support to make sure they have the best opportunities,” he says.

Hall Render Killian Heath & Lyman Honored with Spirit of Philanthropy Award

On April 22, 2009, at the IUPUI Campus Center, Chancellor Charles Bantz and several hundred community and civic leaders gathered for the twenty-first annual Spirit of Philanthropy Awards Luncheon, sponsored jointly by The Center on Philanthropy at Indiana University, the IU Foundation, and the IUPUI campus. Each school on the Indianapolis campus honored individuals or entities that provided exemplary voluntary service or financial support to the school.

THE LAW SCHOOL WAS PROUD TO RECOGNIZE THE LAW FIRM OF HALL RENDER KILLIAN HEATH AND LYMAN AND ITS ATTORNEYS FOR THEIR TRANSFORMATIONAL IMPACT ON OUR SCHOOL. Hall Render not only hires many of the school’s top graduates, but those alumni give back to the school by volunteering time and donating money to help law students become well-versed in the area of health law. The law school’s William S. and Christine S. Hall Center for Law and Health enjoys an excellent reputation in the health law field thanks in part to the support of Hall Render and its attorneys. John C. Render, Jr., ‘71, a partner at Hall Render and a graduate of the law school, accepted the award on behalf of the firm.

Hall Render provides health care organizations with full service legal representation. From the time William S. Hall, ’51 founded the firm in 1967, Hall Render has focused its practice in health law and is now recognized as one of the nation’s preeminent health law firms. More than 100 Hall Render attorneys represent 500-plus organizations in a range of health care-related issues from fraud and abuse to real estate contracts to HIPAA and tax regulations.
Annual contributions of $100 to $499 to the Indiana University School of Law–Indianapolis are recognized as Law School Associates. Giving totals include gifts, pledge payments and matching gifts received by the IU Foundation between July 1, 2008 and June 30, 2009. The entire law school family is sincerely appreciative of the loyalty of the alumni and friends who contribute annually to the school. We give special thanks to the following alumni and friends who have contributed at the Law School Associates level.

How to Make a Gift

Make your check payable to the Indiana University Foundation and write “Law–Indianapolis” on the memo line. Send your check to: Indiana University School of Law–Indianapolis c/o Indiana University Foundation, PO Box 663802 Indianapolis, IN 46266-3802.

Give a gift online at www.indylaw.indiana.edu/alum.

Electronic Funds Transfer is a convenient, easy way to support the law school. When you enroll, your gift will automatically transfer from your checking account or be billed to your credit card. All gifts are processed around the 15th of each month and will appear on your checking account or credit card statement. You may change or cancel gifts at any time by notifying us of the change in writing. EFT forms can be found at www.indylaw.indiana.edu/alum/support.htm

To make a gift of securities or to make a planned gift, contact us at 317-274-1906 and a member of the Development Department will be happy to assist you.

How Your Gifts Are Spent

Faculty A key measure of any law school is the quality of its faculty. In order to attract and keep superior teachers and scholars, we need unrestricted Annual Fund contributions that will support faculty recruitment, retention, and professional development.

Law Library Gifts help maintain one of the largest and most highly automated legal collections in Indiana. The library serves law students, faculty, members of the bar, and citizens of Indiana.

Students Unrestricted gifts to the Annual Fund help to defray the high cost of tuition and other fees and assist student groups and programs with their initiatives. Gifts also enable student representatives to attend national and regional conferences and competitions.

Additional Support Private unrestricted gifts are essential for funding guest lecturers, professional development programs, student recruitment, publications, alumni events and commencement.
Each year, alumni in a number of law firms and corporations participate in the Annual Law Firm and Corporate Campaign. A volunteer chair is recruited from each firm or corporation, and they are asked to solicit contributions from fellow alumni in their office. This annual campaign is vital to the law school’s annual fund and is, by far, our most successful fund raising drive of the year. Thank you to the 2008-2009 Campaign Chairs and everyone who participated in the 2008-2009 Law Firm and Corporate Campaign. We would especially like to recognize the firms with the highest percentage of participation, as well as the firms and corporations who are recognized for their total dollars contributed in the 2008-2009 campaign.

HOW CAN I DOUBLE MY GIFT?

$ \times 2 = $$

Your employer may match your gift for higher education. Some will even triple it! For each gift or installment, ask your human resources office for a Matching Gift form, fill it out, and send it in with your gift.
Legacy Society 2008-2009 Donors

The Legacy Society honors individuals who seek to advance legal education at the IU School of Law–Indianapolis by investing in its future. The society enrolls benefactors who confirm planned or deferred gift arrangements benefiting the law school. When alumni and friends let us know that they have included the school in their estate plans, they are invited to join the Legacy Society.

If you have included our school in your estate plans, please let us know. Doing so will ensure that we understand your wishes and can use your gift exactly as you intend. It also allows the school to make note of your gift as we plan for the future—and finally, and most importantly, it allows us to thank you, honor, and show our appreciation for your generosity. We would like to thank the following members of the Legacy Society.

For more information about including the law school in your estate plans, please contact Joyce M. Hertko, Director of Major Gifts, at (317) 278-9736 or jhertko@iupui.edu.

We Make a Living by What We Get.
We Make a Life by What We Give.
—Winston Churchill

There are several ways you can support the law school, reduce your income taxes, and even retain payments for life.

Types of Planned Gifts:

- Outright Gifts (cash, securities, closely held stock, tangible personal property)
- Life Income Plans (charitable gift annuity, charitable remainder annuity trust, charitable remainder unitrust)
- Revocable Gifts (bequest, revocable living trust, retirement plan assets)
- Other Gifts (donor advised fund, IRA rollover, retained life estate, charitable lead trust, life insurance)
We give special thanks to the following alumni and friends who, between July 1, 2008 and June 30, 2009, chose to contribute to the school by giving a gift in honor or memory of a friend, alumnus, or parent. A gift in honor or in memory is a special way to pay tribute to those individuals.

MARY HARTER MITCHELL was born March 9, 1953 in Ashland, Ohio, and grew up in Anderson, Indiana. Her parents were Nathan F. R. Harter (Lutheran minister) and Mary Harter. Mary is survived by husband, Frank Burch Brown; ex-spouse, Dan Mitchell; daughters, Clara Hope Mitchell and Sally Hope Mitchell; siblings, Elisabeth Jones, Rachel Harter, Susanna Harter, Nathan Harter, William Harter, and John Harter. She was predeceased by sister Rebecca Harter.

Mary was a devoted mother who gave generously of herself to her daughters, Sally and Clara, whom she homeschooled in highly creative ways. She encouraged their love of literature, dance, and theatre.

A Professor at the law school since 1980, Mary taught contracts as well as courses in elder law, law and religion, rape law, prisoners’ rights, and prison literature. She had served on virtually every faculty committee and as faculty advisor for many student organizations. Mary was the author of Legal Reference for Older Hoosiers and recipient of an IU Trustee’s Teaching Award in 2003. Mary also regularly took graduate courses as a non-degree student at Christian Theological Seminary, Indianapolis.

She was a member of First Friends (Quaker) Meeting, Indianapolis. A strong advocate for peace, she lived her faith through service to others. Mary had a lifelong commitment to social justice and to women’s rights. Mary was currently at work on a substantial article on the concept of human dignity in law.

As a poet, Mary had a gift for finding the sacred in unexpected places, for tracing the amazing peculiarities and delights of love, and for at once protesting and ultimately affirming the mysterious but often painful paradoxes of life and death.

Newly wed to CTS religion scholar and musician Frank Burch Brown, Mary and Frank shared a keen interest in religion, poetry, music, architecture, and other arts, as well as the natural world. Mary collected rocks, especially fossils. She was fond of canoeing on Sugar Creek in Indiana and she loved the mountains and rocky deserts of the West. She eagerly traveled abroad.

Mary was beloved by the numerous students she taught and by the many people whose lives she touched. Mary’s sudden and untimely death leaves all who knew her in a state of shock and grief—but also with boundless gratitude for the gift of her life and for her compassionate, passionate, and ever generous spirit.
Carnation
by Mary Harter Mitchell

My mother made my daughter’s white christening gown.
I held the child to water, she was heavier than the petals she looked.

Holy-furled once-borns,
we lift you
against the weight of our desire to root cut flowers in ground we can stand.

When I die, if people ask,
did I favor some cause
to which they might contribute,
say yes: white carnations
in clear water.

New Faces at the Law School

Carrie Hagan-Gray Joins Clinical Faculty

CARRIE HAGAN-GRAY joined the law school faculty this Fall as a Clinical Associate Professor of Law in the Civil Practice Clinic. From 2005–07 she worked as a family law attorney and guardian ad litem with The Legal Aid Society of Southwest Ohio. She also was supervising attorney for the University of Cincinnati/Legal Aid of Southwest Ohio’s Domestic Violence and Civil Protection Order Clinic. During the 2008–09 academic year, she was a Visiting Professor of Law at the Roger Williams University School of Law in Rhode Island, where she was director and supervising attorney for the Community Justice and Legal Assistance Clinic. Previously, she worked for a small civil rights and land use firm in Cincinnati, Ohio and at the New Zealand Human Rights Commission in Auckland, New Zealand.

Professor Hagan-Gray received her B.A. from the University of Kansas in 2001 and her J.D. from the University of Cincinnati College of Law in 2005. Her teaching and research interests include clinical education, Hague Convention child abduction litigation, and the issues surrounding domestic violence and family dynamics.

Prescott Teaches Courses in Tax

PETER A. PRESCOTT joined the law school’s faculty this Fall as Associate Professor of Law. His teaching interests include federal income tax, corporate tax, partnership tax, and international tax. Before arriving at Indiana University, he was a tax attorney for Exxon Mobil Corporation in Houston, Texas and served as an adjunct professor at the University of Houston Law Center, where he taught Tax Ethics and Advanced Corporate Tax. Professor Prescott has also worked in the tax sections of Haynes and Boone, LLP and Chamberlain, Hrdlicka, White, Williams & Martin. A certified public accountant, he was a Senior Manager in KPMG LLP’s Tax Controversy Services practice.

He is licensed to practice law and public accountancy in Texas. In 1999, he received the AICPA Elijah Watt Sells Silver Medal for earning the second highest score nationwide on the May 1999 CPA Exam. Professor Prescott received his J.D. degree (summa cum laude) from the University of Houston Law Center where he graduated second in his class and was an articles editor of the Houston Law Review. He also holds a Master in Professional Accounting degree from the University of Texas at Austin and a Master of Science in Chemistry degree from the University of Chicago.

Law School Welcomes Veteran IP Litigator to Direct IP Center

JOHN R. SCHAIBLEY, III will join the IU School of Law–Indianapolis as Executive Director of the school’s Center for Intellectual Property Law and Innovation in January. Schaibley is retiring from Baker & Daniels after more than 25 years of litigation experience. Much of his recent practice has been on intellectual property matters. His focus included patent litigation, including infringement and licensing disputes, as well as complex breach of contract actions and arbitrations, often involving complex technology issues. He also has extensive experience with trademarks, copyrights, trade regulation, administrative law and environmental issues. He has worked with major corporations in the medical device, pharmaceutical, electronics and other industries, while representing clients in federal and state courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court.

“I think John Schaibley is a tremendous addition to our ranks,” says law school dean Gary R. Roberts. “What he can and no doubt will do for our IP program here, which is so important to the local bar and business community, is tremendous. I am very happy and excited that he is coming aboard.”

A graduate of Purdue University (B.A., 1975), Schaibley graduated first in his law school class at Indiana University (J.D., Maurer School of Law, 1981), where he was Executive Editor of the Indiana Law Journal. He is a member of the Order of the Coif and was a member of the Order of the Barristers. He has received West Publishing Company Hornbook Awards three times and American Jurisprudence Awards four times. He received the Edwards Fellowship and was also the recipient of the American College of Trial Lawyers Medal for Excellence in Advocacy.

Schaibley served as a law clerk at all three levels of the federal judiciary. He clerked for Judge Jesse E. Eschbach in both the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Indiana and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, and for Justice John Paul Stevens in the U.S. Supreme Court. His honors include being chosen for “The Best Lawyers in America” for 2009-2010, and “Indiana’s Best Lawyers” (2009).

He will teach a course on patent litigation in the Spring 2010 semester.

CYNTHIA BAKER received a two-year appointment to the Indiana Commission for Higher Education. She was appointed as the statutorily-authorized faculty member to the Commission by Governor Mitch Daniels. Professor Baker’s term will conclude in July of 2011. Additionally, she presented The Big Objectives and Fine Print of State Energy Policy to the participants in the 9th annual Program on Law and State Government Fellowship Symposium, State Law and Energy Policy: Initiatives and Ideas Powering the Future, on October 2, 2009.

CHANCELLOR EMERITUS GERALD L. BEPKO was recognized with the Chancellor’s Medal at the IUPUI 40th Anniversary Breakfast on September 23. Other 40th Anniversary recipients of the Medal are Senator Richard Lugar, former state Senator and Lt. Governor John Mutz, former state Senator Larry Borst, former state Senator Dr. Ned Lamkin and former City-County Council President, Rozelle Boyd. At the same event the University, through Chancellor Charles Bantz, presented the Chancellor Emeritus Bepko sculpted personal bust mounted on a pedestal which has now been placed in the IUPUI University Library.

Chancellor Emeritus Bepko served as host and speaker at the October 10 dinner for the Bepko Fellows, a group of 14 Indiana University graduate students in Medicine, Engineering, Science, Business, Education, Informatics, Philanthropy and Law. These graduate students were Bepko Scholars as IUPUI undergraduates.

He has been named Chair of the Rhodes Scholars Selection Committee for the 2009 selections for Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio. The selection sessions took place November 20-21, 2009. Chancellor Emeritus Bepko also serves as Chair of the Committee on Succession for the office of Chair of the Board of the Lumina Foundation for Education, March 2009 through December 2009. Additionally, he continues to serve as an at-large member of the Indiana Commission for Higher Education, and on its Strategic Directions Committee.

On June 11, he met with FBI Director Robert Mueller, in his office and at his invitation, on the 41st Anniversary of incurring severe injuries on surveillance duty in New York as an FBI Agent. Recently, he visited the IU School of Medicine and Purdue University as a member and Secretary of the Showalter Trust Selection Committee which awards support of roughly $1.5 million each year for research, primarily at the IU School of Medicine and Purdue University, but also the Methodist Research Foundation.

Chancellor Emeritus Bepko was named honorary Co-Chair of the Committee for the Celebration of Bishop T. Garrott Benjamin’s 40th Anniversary as a Pastor. Benjamin is Pastor of Light of the World Christian Church in Indianapolis.

On August 2-4, 2009, SHAWN BOYNE, along with Professors EMILY MORRIS and MAX HUFFMAN, presented at the Fourth Annual Big Ten Aspiring Scholars Conference, hosted by the University of Illinois College of Law in Champaign. Professor Boyne also was interviewed by WIBC radio and FOX news, to provide expert comment on legal issues in the news.

In July, KEN CHESTEK was one of three speakers at the opening plenary session of the Applied Legal Storytelling Conference held at Lewis and Clark Law School in Portland, Oregon. He presented his preliminary work on his new article, “Judging By the Numbers: An Empirical Study of the Power of Story” during that session. The article will appear in the next issue of the Journal of the Association of Legal Writing Directors.

In September, he was invited to be a guest lecturer at Rutgers University School of Law in Camden, where he taught a two-hour class to advanced legal writing students; discussed his “Judging By the Numbers” research; and then helped the students to think about and use narrative theory in writing an appellate brief. Professor Chestek is currently involved in the planning of the 14th Biennial Conference of the Legal Writing Institute. As President-Elect of LWI, he serves as co-chair for that conference, which will take place at the Marriott Marco Island Beach Resort in Marco Island, Florida, in June 2010.

Faculty News

On October 7th, he presented on “Surface Water Drainage Laws: An Overview,” before the Indiana Senate Water Resources Study Committee in Indianapolis. Also in October, Professor Cole made a presentation on “Statutory Obstacles to Regulatory Benefit-Cost Analysis,” at the Society for Benefit-Cost Analysis Annual Meeting in Washington, D.C. On November 10th, he presented on “Perspectives on Cost-Benefit Analysis,” at the Workshop on Cost-Benefit Analysis and Issue Advocacy, sponsored by the Institute for Policy Analysis, New York University School of Law, November 10, 2009. Professor Cole also reports that between June 1 and October 6, he logged more than 2,500 miles on his bicycle!

JEFF COOPER was appointed to, and serves on, the Local Rules Advisory Committee of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana.

JENNIFER DROBAC has published “Jazzing Up Family Law,” 42 Indiana L. Rev. 533-565 (2009). She made several presentations in the Fall, including “Adolescent Brain Development and Its Legal Implications,” University of Pennsylvania Neuroscience Boot Camp on August 12 and “Distorted Torts: Neuroscience, Capacity, and Adolescent Feasors,” an IU School of Law–Indianapolis Faculty Presentation on October 6. She presented on the topic, “Adolescent Development and the Legal Capacity to Consent,” live from Indianapolis via video simulcast to the Center for Children, Law & Policy at the University of Houston Law Center, on October 23.

Additionally, Professor Drobac received a 2009-10 John S. Grimes Fellowship Award for excellence in scholarship. She was a 2009 Law Faculty Nominee for an Indiana University Distinguished Teaching Award, and a 2009 Admitted Scholar, University of Pennsylvania Neuroscience Boot Camp. As such, she was one of 30 academics invited to attend a summer institute, August 2-12, on neuroscience for professionals in law, ethics, education, and other fields.

On October 1, GEORGE E. EDWARDS gave a presentation in Rome, Italy at the Commission for Cultural Exchange between the United States and Italy (Commissione per gli Scambi Culturali fra l’Italia e gli Stati Uniti), which is an affiliate office of the U.S. Department of State and houses the U.S.-Italy Fulbright Commission. The presentation focused on American Legal Education, and highlighted opportunities for Italian students to receive Master of Laws (LL.M.) and other advanced degrees in the United States. Attendees and participants included Fulbright staff, representatives from Italian law schools, and staff of EducationUSA (another US State Department affiliate).

While in Rome, Professor Edwards was also a delegate to the 137th meeting of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) Council held at FAO world headquarters September 28-October 2. The FAO Council is the executive organ of the FAO Conference, which is the supreme governing body of the FAO that meets in regular session every two years. The 49-member council has powers delegated to it by the Conference, and exercises functions dealing with the world food and agricultural situation and related matters, current and prospective activities of the Organization, and other matters.

JOHN HILL’s book, The Political Centrist, was released by Vanderbilt University Press in November. The book argues that liberalism and conservatism are defunct ideologies—that what passes for “liberalism” today is increasingly a statist idea advocating all-encompassing government that runs counter to true liberalism, and that “conservatism” is really simply the older liberalism brigaded with a moralistic social agenda. The book advances centrist solutions to some of the major problems of our time, including the death penalty, immigration reform, affirmative action, abortion and the problem of judicial activism, among others.

Professor Hill delivered a talk at the UNLV law school on Oct. 14th on the history of liberalism and conservatism. The talk was entitled, “The Paradox of Liberalism, The Dilemma of Conservatism.”

MAX HUFFMAN presented his abstract, “Revisiting Rescission,” at the University of Illinois Untenured Faculty Workshop in August. He completed and has submitted for publication a paper, “Iqbal, Twombly, and the Expected Cost of False Positive Errors,” together with Professor Mark Anderson, and presented the paper to the faculty at the law school through the lunchtime colloquium series. In October, Professor Huffman traveled to Dublin, Ireland, for the fourth Antitrust Marathon, where he presented a discussion paper titled “Competition Law and Consumer Protection.” A revised version of that paper will be published in the European Competition Journal. On December 2, Professor Huffman organized and participated in a debate with Dean Gary Roberts and Professor Antony Page regarding American Needle v. NFL, which addresses the question whether the NFL is a single entity or a group of competitors for antitrust purposes. Also in December, together with Professor Eleanor Kinney, Professor David Orentlicher, and the Hall Center for Law and Health, Professor Huffman hosted several antitrust and health law experts from across the United States for a brainstorming session and panel discussion on health care and antitrust, with an emphasis on health care reform legislation. That event was planned in cooperation with the Washington, D.C., think tank, American Antitrust Institute. Professor Huffman then traveled to The Washington University in St. Louis School of Law to present a draft of “Revisiting Rescission,” which deals with the rescission remedy in consumer contracts. He is also working on a paper, “Behavioral Exploitation and Antitrust,” which deals with firms’ abilities to gain and preserve market power through exploiting known shortcomings in consumer decision making. Professor Huffman has been named a Dean’s Fellow for 2009-10.

ROBERT KATZ presented two works-in-progress at the Midwestern Law and Economics Association annual conference, held at Notre Dame Law School on October 9 and 10: “You Make Me Sick: Repugnance and Efficiency in Human Tissue Transplantation,” and “Right Now It’s Only a Notion: Giving Form to Social Enterprise” (with Prof. Antony Page).

On October 22, Professor Katz gave a presentation and participated in a panel discussion on federal tax exemption for nonprofit hospitals at the Community Benefits Symposium, held at IUPUI and sponsored by the Hall Center for Law and Health. On October 26, Professor Katz presented a work-in-progress on social enterprise in the healthcare industry at the IU Center for Bioethics’ Predictive Health Ethics Research (PredictER) program.

On November 19, Professor Katz presented a paper at the annual conference of ARNOVA (the Association for Research on Nonprofit Organizations and Voluntary Action), held in Cleveland, on “Channelling Towards Charity: Presumed Consent to Organ Donation as a Case Study in Pro-Social Default Rules.” Finally, on November 30, Professor Katz presented a paper on “Notion-Building: Giving Form to Social Enterprise,” at the Workshop in Political Theory and Policy Analysis, held at Indiana University in Bloomington.

In July, NORMAN LEFSTEIN, Professor and Dean Emeritus, testified as an expert witness in a case in Miami concerning the overwhelming number of cases that an assistant public defender was being assigned to represent. As he explained to the trial court, no lawyer could furnish competent representation consistent with Rules of Professional Conduct when seeking to represent simultaneously well over 100 clients, virtually all of whom were charged with felony offenses. In August, the American Bar Association House of Delegates adopted a detailed policy statement on public defense workloads for which Professor Lefstein served as the reporter. The statement is known as the ABA Eight Guidelines of Public Defense Related to Excessive Workloads, available at www.indigentdefense.org. In September, Professor Lefstein was part of a small group of persons invited to meet at the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., with Attorney General Eric Holder to discuss issues related to indigent defense nationwide. In November, he met in Harrisburg with a Pennsylvania committee appointed by the legislature to make recommendations concerning the delivery of defense services for the indigent in criminal and juvenile cases in that state. Also in November, during the annual meeting of the National Legal Aid and Defender Association in Denver, Professor Lefstein spoke at two programs on matters concerning public defense.

He gave a presentation on “Business Methods and Industry Norms” at a conference on Patents and Fostering Entrepreneurship at George Washington University Law School in June.

On May 27, 2009, Professor Magliocca’s op-ed article “Scenes From Judge Sotomayor’s Courtroom,” ran in the New York Times. Professor Magliocca has known Justice Sotomayor for 13 years, after working for her as a summer intern in the Federal District Court in New York. The following day, he was interviewed by NPR in relation to the New York Times piece.

HEATHERMcCABEHAS published, McCabe & Kinney, “Health Care Funding” in The Child: An Encyclopedic Companion (Shweder, Bidell, Dailey, Dixon, Miller & Modell, eds., University of Chicago Press 2009). In June, she served as a moderator for a panel discussion, “Pandemic Influenza/Disease Outbreak: A Scenario Based Discussion,” as part of the Emergency Preparedness: Cross-Sector Coordination Planning Conference, sponsored by the Marion County Health Department and the Centers for Disease Control.

In September, McCabe was a participant in the Interdisciplinary Collaborative Education Conference at Georgia State University, and in October, she presented a lecture for the Indiana State Department of Health, Injury and Violence Prevention Course, “General Principles of Policy and Advocacy in Injury Prevention.” Her issue brief, New ADA Amendment Benefits People with Disabilities and Businesses, (Foddrill, M. and McCabe, H.), was prepared for the Center for Health Policy, School of Public and Environmental Affairs, IUPUI, in 2009. In fall of 2009, McCabe began providing academic advising for all Health Law Concentration students, as well as many of the health-related joint degree students.

During the summer, JIM NEHF co-authored a chapter on the Regulation of Security Interests in Consumer Assets, in SECURED TRANSACTIONS UNDER THE UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE (J. McDonnell, ed., 2010 rev.). He was invited by the House of Lords to comment on the proposed EU Consumer Rights Directive, EU CONSUMER RIGHTS DIRECTIVE: GETTING IT RIGHT, vol. II (House of Lords, European Union Committee 2009), and was selected by the American Branch of the International Law Association to serve on a newly-created Committee on International Protection of Consumers. Professor Nehf spoke on the subject of “Food Safety in the United States” to students and faculty at the Renmin University law school in Beijing and to members of the bar association in Nanning, China. As Chair of the consumer law working group in the Cyberspace Committee of the ABA Section on Business Law, Professor Nehf is updating the ABA’s safeshopping.org website, which gives consumers information about their legal rights when shopping for goods and services online. He also taught a course this summer on EU trade law at the law school’s LL.M. program in Alexandria, Egypt and continues to serve as Associate Dean of Graduate Studies.

In June, he gave a presentation on “Universal Access to Health Care: The Lessons of History,” at the Annual Health Law Professors Conference of the American Society of Law, Medicine & Ethics, at Case Western Reserve University School of Law in Cleveland. He also presented on the topic, “Ethical and Policy Implications with Vaccinations,” at the Annual Conference on Health, Disability, and the Law, in the Wynne Courtroom at the law school.

During the summer of 2009, MICHAEL PITTS had two articles published in law reviews: “What Will the Life of Riley v. Kennedy Mean for Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act?,” 68 Mo. L. Rev. 481 (2009) examined the impact of a recent Supreme Court case on the Voting Rights Act’s preclearance provision; “Empirically Assessing the Impact of Photo Identification at the Polls Through an Examination of Provisional Balloting,” 24 J. L. & Pol. 475 (2008) analyzed the impact of Indiana’s photo identification law on the May 2008 primary election. In June, Professor Pitts taught professional responsibility in the law school’s Egypt program. In July, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution published “Outdated racial stereotypes can mask subtler forms of bias,” an op-ed (co-authored with Professor Page) about how unconscious bias may have played a role in the arrest of Henry Louis Gates, Jr. In August, the Pew Center on the States published Professor Pitts’ commentary on provisional ballots and voter identification as part of a report on provisional balloting in the United States at the 2008 general election. In September, he provided commentary to radio, television and newspaper outlets (including The New York Times and the Associated Press) about the Indiana Court of Appeals ruling that declared photo identification to be a violation of the Indiana Constitution. In addition, Professor Pitts has also been named a John S. Grimes Fellow and a Dean’s Fellow for 2009-10.

FRAN QUIGLEY’s book, Walking Together, Walking Far: How a U.S. and African Medical School Partnership is Winning the Fight against HIV/AIDS was published by Indiana University Press in July, and his article, “Growing Political Will From the Grassroots: How Social Movement Principles Can Reverse the Dismal Legacy of Rule of Law Interventions,” was published this fall in Volume 41.1 of the COLUMBIA HUMAN RIGHTS LAW REVIEW. Professor Quigley made presentations at the ABA conference, “HIV/AIDS and the Rule of Law: Human Rights at Home and Abroad,” at Notre Dame University on September 11, discussing the Legal Aid Centre of Eldoret (LACE), a human rights legal clinic integrated into one of the world’s largest HIV/AIDS and poverty control programs, the IU School of Medicine-founded and Nobel Peace Prize-nominated AMPATH program in western Kenya. Quigley is associate director of AMPATH and co-founder of LACE. He also presented his recent book at the IUPUI Faculty Club’s “Reading at the Table” series in November. Professor Quigley continues to publish a twice-monthly column in the editorial page of The Indianapolis Star and other publications.

JAMES P. WHITE, Professor Emeritus, served as a consultant at Peking University Transnational School of Law in Shenzhen, PRC, from May 30-June 3. On June 6, the ABA Council on Education held a dinner in his honor and from June 16-19, he was in Lausanne, Switzerland to review the legal education program there. On July 7, Professor White attended the ABA International Committee meeting in Chicago and later that month, he traveled to Galway, Ireland, to speak at a Consortium Summer Program. August found Professor White back in Chicago for the ABA Annual Meeting and on October 5, he spoke at the Widener University Law School’s 20th Anniversary celebration in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. On October 29, he visited California Western Law School for its Board of Visitors meeting in San Diego and participated in the UNC site evaluation of Charlotte Law School from November 19-20.

Professor White was reappointed to the American Bar Association Central and Eastern European Law Initiative Advisory Committee and serves on the Butler University Board of Trustees, serving as secretary of the board and chair of the Academic Affairs Committee and the Holcolm Research Institute.

LLOYD T. (TOM) WILSON continued his involvement in international legal education by serving as Resident Professor for the Chinese Law Summer Program at Renmin University of China School of Law in Beijing, China, from May 22 to June 20. While in Beijing, Wilson also delivered a lecture on comparative contract law at the China University of Political Science and Law.

From August 31 through September 4, Professor Wilson conducted a program on the U.S. legal system for a group of professors and students from Faculdades Espirito Santenses, a law school located in Vitoria, Espirito Santo, Brazil. In addition to three hours of class instruction per day, Wilson led the group on legal and cultural field trips. The legal-related field trips included meetings with Indiana Supreme Court Chief Justice Randall T. Shepard, Indiana Court of Appeals Judge Edward W. Najam, Jr., Lieutenant Governor Becky Skillman, and Indiana Senators Phil Boots and Mike Delph, who is a third-year student at our law school. Baker & Daniels hosted the group for an afternoon at its Indianapolis office, where Jacqueline Simmons described the firm’s international practice and Brita Horvath, ’02, spoke about diversity initiatives. Wilson and the group also led a panel discussion on Brazilian law and international law with students and faculty at Wabash College.

Professor Andrew Klein Honored by IBA

Professor Andrew R. Klein was nominated by the Indianapolis Bar Foundation as a Distinguished Fellow. Klein, who joined the law school in 2000, is the Paul E. Beam Professor of Law. He is an active scholar, having published articles in a number of leading law journals. He is co-author of a casebook, Torts: Cases, Problems and Exercises (Lexis/Nexis 2nd ed. 2005). In addition, Professor Klein is a dedicated classroom teacher who has won eight student teaching awards during his career. Professor Klein also is a national lecturer on tort law for BarBri Bar Review.

Deans Visit Colleagues and Alumni in China

Dean Gary R. Roberts, along with Associate Dean for Graduate Studies, James P. Nehf and Assistant Dean for Graduate Studies, Claire J. Grove, ‘99, traveled to Korea and China in June, 2009. They met a group of alumni and faculty at Angel Restaurant on the Renmin campus in Beijing on Monday, June 8.

Justice Richard M. Givan, ‘51

The Honorable Richard M. Givan, ‘51, passed away July 21, 2009. Justice Givan served the State of Indiana through public service that included 26 years as a jurist on the Indiana Supreme Court, including nearly 13 years as Chief Justice. In addition to his remarkable legal career, he is remembered fondly by court staff as a loyal friend and great storyteller. Justice Givan was Indiana’s ninety-sixth justice. He was elected to the Court in 1968 and served continuously until his retirement in December 1994. He was the founding chairman of the Indiana Judicial Center, which provides education to judges across the state. While on the Court, Justice Givan heard nearly 6,000 cases, authored more than 1,500 majority opinions and dissented in more than 400 cases.

Those in attendance at his retirement dinner in January 1995 were amused to find his favorite “Givanisms” printed for them to take home. Justice Givan commonly used sayings including, “you pile on too many apples, you can’t shove the cart” and “it’s not that he doesn’t know there’s a problem, it’s that he doesn’t know that he doesn’t know that there is a problem.” The colloquialisms continue to remind colleagues and friends of Justice Givan’s colorful personality.

Born June 7, 1921, in Indianapolis, Richard Givan graduated from Decatur Central High School in 1939. Justice Givan received an LL.B. from Indiana University in 1951 and was admitted to the Indiana bar in 1952. While a law student, he was assistant librarian for the Indiana Supreme Court, later becoming a research assistant for the Court. He was the first person to serve as a law clerk at the Court. He was appointed deputy public defender of Indiana after graduation from law school and served in that post until 1954. From 1954 to 1966, he was Assistant Attorney General of Indiana, pleading cases before both the Indiana and U.S. Supreme Courts. In 1967, he was a Representative and a ranking member of the Judiciary Committee in the House. He was also chairman of the board of directors of the Indiana Judicial Conference from 1974 to 1987, served on the board of managers of the Indiana Judges Association from 1975 to 1987, and became an Indiana Judicial College graduate in 1989.

In addition to his legal career, Justice Givan served as a pilot in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II and was later a flight instructor with the Air Corps Reservists.
Deborah K. Hepler, ‘94

Deb served as a judicial law clerk for Judge Larry J. McKinney of the U.S. District Court, as a senior associate at Locke Reynolds LLP, and as an Adjunct Professor of Law for the IU School of Law-Indianapolis. At the time of her death, she was General Counsel for the Indiana Housing and Community Development Authority, as well as a member of the board of directors for the Indiana Coalition against Domestic Violence, Indiana Legal Services, Inc. and the Domestic Violence Network of Greater Indianapolis. In 2000, Deb Hepler founded the Protective Order Pro Bono Project of Greater Indianapolis, a project providing free legal services to victims of domestic violence. In recognition of those efforts, she was honored as the 2005 Outstanding Alumna of the Year by the law school’s Alumnae Network.

Her other awards include the 2005 Chancellor’s Community Award for Excellence in Civil Engagement and the 2001 Prelude to Light Award from the Domestic Violence Network of Greater Indianapolis. Hepler will be remembered as a passionate defender of individual protection and rights. Deb recently celebrated 37 years of marriage to her husband, Jay Hepler, who survives; as well as her two children, Eric and Anne Hepler.
