The IMPACT Campaign:
Your Chance to Make a Difference for the Law School
As I complete my fourth year as Dean, I am struck by what a marvelous law school we have, how far it has come in its brief history with a full-time day program, and the tremendous impact it and its more than 10,000 alumni have on Indiana and beyond. We should all be extremely proud. At the same time, however, I am also struck by the fact that as good as the school is, there is still much we need to do to make it the very best it can be.

For this reason, we are embarking on an ambitious capital campaign, the success of which is vital to the school’s ability, in an increasingly competitive environment, to continue producing great lawyers, judges, and leaders. This issue of the magazine focuses on this campaign and, consistent with our recently adopted strategic plan, on the areas in which resources raised will be invested—faculty, student scholarships, nationally prominent programs and skills training/experiential learning.

While the school is generally ranked highly among all U.S. law schools, its funding is near the bottom. Our direct expenditures per student last year ranked 141st out of 198 and our financial aid per student budget was in the bottom quartile. Our resources are by far the lowest of all Big Ten law schools. If we can provide an excellent education for students with this small amount of funding, consider what we could do if we had sufficient dollars to do what most other law schools can do already—such as fund endowed faculty chairs, or offer core classes with fewer than 100 students in the classroom. Every year, we lose quality applicants to weaker schools that can offer greater scholarship packages, and we are unable to provide opportunities and services to our students and faculty that are taken for granted elsewhere. Just think what we could do for our students if we had sufficient funding.

For the next two years, our campaign leadership and I will be challenging alumni and others to step up and invest in what is arguably the most important educational asset in Indiana. I am confident that we will all meet that challenge.

Professor Magliocca’s Book Released in May

ALTHOUGH POPULIST CANDIDATE WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN lost the presidential elections of 1896, 1900, and 1908, he was the most influential political figure of his era.

In his latest book, Professor Gerard N. Magliocca explores how Bryan’s effort to reach the White House energized conservatives across the nation and caused a transformation in constitutional law. The Tragedy of William Jennings Bryan: Constitutional Law and the Politics of Backlash was published by Yale University Press in May.

“This book tells a story about constitutional transition that is especially relevant in the midst of the debate between President Obama and the Tea Party about the direction of the country,” says Professor Magliocca.

Gerard N. Magliocca joined the faculty of the law school following two years as an associate with Covington & Burling and one year as a clerk for Judge Guido Calabresi on the Second Circuit. He received the Best New Professor Award from the student body in 2004 and the Black Cane (Most Outstanding Professor) Award in 2006. In 2007, his book on Andrew Jackson, Andrew Jackson and the Constitution: The Rise and Fall of Generational Regimes (Univ. Press of Kansas 2007) (Paperback ed. 2011), was the subject of an hour-long program on C-Span’s “Book TV.” In the Fall of 2008, Professor Magliocca held the Fulbright-Distinguished Research Chair of the Roosevelt Study Center in Middelburg, The Netherlands. He is also a regular blogger on Concurring Opinions and Balkinization.

Dean Gary Roberts Selected as NFL Network Analyst

DEAN GARY R. ROBERTS IS THE ON-AIR LEGAL ANALYST FOR THE NFL NETWORK with respect to the current labor dispute that is threatening the 2011 professional football season. He taped his first segment for the network on March 4.

One of the foremost experts on sports law and antitrust law in the country, Roberts has been quoted in numerous media outlets regarding the NFL strike, including The New York Times, USA Today, and The Washington Post. He has also been quoted on a variety of legal issues in the Associated Press, Forbes, Fortune, The Los Angeles Times, The National Law Journal, Sports Illustrated, The Sporting News, The Wall Street Journal, and USA Today, and has appeared on ABC World News Tonight, NBC’s Nightline, the CBS Evening News, ESPN’s Sportscenter and Outside the Lines, the McNeil-Lehrer News Hour, NBC Nightly News, and NBC’s Today Show.

Prior to joining the law school in 2007, he was a faculty member, administrator and director of the Sports Law Program at Tulane University Law School. Dean Roberts practiced at Covington and Burling in Washington, D.C., working with Paul Tagliabue and Jeff Pash, where he engaged in antitrust, sports, labor, contract, and trademark litigation.

He co-authored the leading casebook in sports law (Sports and the Law: Text, Cases and Problems, now in its 4th edition) and has served as president of the Sports Lawyers Association and chairman of the AALS Sports Law Section. He is currently editor-in-chief of the Sports Lawyers Association’s on-line newsletter, The Sports Lawyer.

Second-year Student Todd Hassee Selected as Schweitzer Fellow

ON APRIL 29, THE ALBERT SCHWEITZER FELLOWSHIP (ASF) announced the selection of its inaugural class of Indiana Schweitzer Fellows—one of whom is second-year student Todd Hassee. Over the next year, Hassee will join approximately 260 other 2011-12 Schweitzer Fellows across the country in conceptualizing and carrying out service projects that address the health needs of underserved individuals and communities. Specifically, Hassee will address the legal needs of low-income individuals by working to establish a medical-legal partnership [MLP] at the Indiana University Student Outreach Clinic, a free clinic that operates weekly on Saturdays. The IU-SOC is a non-profit, student-run clinic dedicated to providing free medical care and other services to the underserved and uninsured of Indiana. The clinic fulfills this mission through the work and dedication of Indiana University students and faculty, as well as the generosity of donors.

Upon completion of his initial year, Hassee will become a “Schweitzer Fellow for Life” and join a vibrant network of over 2,000 individuals who are skilled in, and committed to, addressing the health needs of the underserved, throughout their careers as professionals.
News Briefs

ON THE FRIDAY, MARCH 11 EPISODE OF INDIANA LAWMAKERS with Jon Schwantes, a professor, alumnus and current student of Indiana University School of Law – Indianapolis joined other experts to discuss the issue of redistricting the Hoosier State.

Several of the questions addressed were how the walkout by House Democrats affected the General Assembly’s ability to draw new maps for the Indiana House and Senate and for Congress; how lawmakers could deliver on the promise to redistrict based on geographic boundaries and citizens’ shared interests as opposed to partisan politics; and what do the latest population shifts mean to the makeup of the General Assembly?

Joining the debate on redistricting issues were Sen. Brandt Hershman, R – Lafayette, a first-year evening student; Sen. Tim Lanane, D – Anderson, a 1977 graduate of the law school; Dave Crooks of the Indiana Citizens Redistricting Commission; and law school Professor Michael Pitts.

IU Law – Indianapolis Professor to Become Dean at Loyola New Orleans

ON APRIL 15, DEAN GARY R. ROBERTS ANNOUNCED that IU School of Law – Indianapolis professor, María Pabón López, had accepted a position as dean of the Loyola University College of Law in New Orleans.

A native of Puerto Rico and an expert on immigration law, Professor López will assume her new duties as Dean this summer. Dean Roberts said, “Loyola has a strong focus on Latin America and on social justice, two areas that fit perfectly with her interests and background. So I am excited and very happy for her, although as the dean of this law school I am distraught over losing her. I know all of us here feel the same way. She will be missed terribly and she will always be welcome back here at IU – Indianapolis.”

López joined the law faculty in 2002. During her tenure here, she received many awards, including a 2008 Diversity in Practice Award from the Indiana Lawyer and the 2007 Rabb Emison Diversity Award from the ISBA. López received the 2006 Trustees Teaching Award from Indiana University.

Jim Voyles ’68, Honored with Buchanan Award

JAMES H. VOYLES, JR., ’68, a partner at Voyles Zahn Paul Hogan & Merriman, was awarded the Indianapolis Bar Association’s Hon. Paul H. Buchanan, Jr. Award of Excellence at a luncheon in his honor on February 17, 2011 at the Hilton Indianapolis. The award, named in honor of the Hon. Paul H. Buchanan, Jr., is given when the association deems one of their members worthy of the recognition, in honor of his/her achievements and service to the legal profession.

Voyles is an active member of the IBA, having served as President in 2009, Vice President in 2007 and 2005. He is also an active member in both the American Bar Association and the Indiana State Bar Association. He has been named a Fellow in the American College of Trial Lawyers, and is a member of the American Board of Criminal Lawyers, and a Board Member of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. A member of the Indiana Supreme Court Character and Fitness Committee, Voyles is a former member of the Indiana Supreme Court Committee on Race and Gender. He is a Trustee of Illinois College and a member of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Hall of Fame Selection Committee.

Voyles has been in private practice for 42 years.
“It is my pleasure to report on the progress of the law school’s overall development program and, specifically, the IMPACT Campaign.”

—Mark Wunder, Assistant Dean for Development

SINCE JOINING THE LAW SCHOOL LAST JUNE, it has been my privilege to get to know many of our wonderful supporters and volunteers—people whose investment of philanthropic gifts and service to the law school have enabled us to advance in our mission to be a premier public law school. IU Law – Indianapolis has a long history of educating men and women who have gone on to become leaders within their law firms, the legal profession, the judiciary, public service, the business community, and the nonprofit sector. As Dean Roberts observed in his remarks in the winter issue of the alumni magazine, our school is more than simply a law school, professorships, student scholarships, and academic programs. The campaign continues to make significant progress toward this goal and the gifts featured in this issue are representative of how donors have generously responded to the opportunity to take a position of philanthropic leadership and to support the law school in substantial ways. In reflecting on these and other gifts to the campaign, I am reminded that there are as many different reasons for giving as there are people who give. Some contribute because they believe in the long-standing tradition of giving back out of a sense of gratitude for what the law school has meant in their lives; some because they want to make a measurable difference in others’ lives; some to establish their own philanthropic legacy by supporting a cause that they value and is important to them; and many to reflect the pride they have in our law school and demonstrate their belief in its potential for the future.

While each of the donors featured in this issue—and the many others who support IU Law – Indianapolis—have their own reasons for making their gifts, one thing each gift has in common: impact. Your support of the law school will impact the IU Law – Indy community by making a first-rate legal education possible, by helping to promote the understanding and development of complex areas of the law and public policy, by enabling the law school to attract and retain talented and committed teachers who shape the careers and lives of their students, and by advancing academic programs that will serve society in positive ways and provide excellent educational opportunities for our students.

In the late 1990’s, many alumni and friends stepped forward to support the campaign that helped fund construction of Inlow Hall, our outstanding law school building. Now, more than a decade since that campaign was initiated (and as we celebrate the 10th anniversary of the opening of Inlow Hall), we are seeking that same kind of generosity and loyal support for endowments that will enable the law school to accomplish its current strategic plan. The law school’s IMPACT Campaign will benefit from the volunteer committee listed on the following page.

On behalf of the entire IU Law – Indianapolis community, I am pleased to extend our sincere gratitude to the alumni and friends whose commitment to excellence has helped our law school be a leader in legal education and educate those who will assume positions of leadership throughout society. Your gifts truly do have an impact!

Quayles’ Gift Makes an Impact on Law Students

By Alicia Dean Carlson

“We met there, we married during law school, took the bar exam together,” Vice President Quayle says. “The law school absolutely played an important part in our lives.”
A NEW SCHOLARSHIP ESTABLISHED BY DAN QUAYLE, ‘74, AND MARIYLN TUCKER QUAYLE, ‘74, will reflect the impact the law school has had on their personal lives and professional careers.

Ask the vice president what his favorite law school memory is and he’s quick to reply.

“Marilyn Tucker,” Quayle quips.

A husband’s politically correct answer—but also an opening to a story that both Dan and Marilyn Quayle clearly enjoy telling. They met in a law school class as students in the evening program and married soon after with the late G. Kent Frandsen, a law school professor, associate dean of students and a Lebanon city judge, officiating. They both had memorable tax classes with Lawrence A. Jegen III, Thomas F. Sheehan Professor of Tax Law and Policy—the future vice president took four classes with Jegen and worked as director of the Inheritance Tax Division of the Indiana Department of Revenue during his last year of law school—and many political discussions.

Marilyn Quayle gave birth to their son just a week before she took the bar exam.

“We met there, we married during law school, took the bar exam together,” Vice President Quayle says. “The law school absolutely played an important part in our lives.”

That personal connection may have played a role in the Quayles’ recent decision to create a scholarship for students through an endowed gift of $200,000, but it’s not the only motivating force.

“It’s an opportunity to say ‘thank you’ to the law school and offer a little assistance to students,” the vice president says.

The Quayles both practiced law in Indiana prior to Dan Quayle’s election to the United States Congress in 1976. He served in Congress from 1977-81, the U.S. Senate from 1981-89, and as vice president from 1989-93. He is currently the chairman of Cerberus Global Investments and travels extensively from their home in Arizona to offices in New York and Asia.

Marilyn Quayle is a former partner with the Indianapolis-based firm Krieg DeVault. She is also an author, philanthropist and sculptor, recently completing a commissioned sculpture of a bucking bull for a breeders association.

“It’s become a passion,” she says. “It’s a way to create something out of nothing. You just get lost in it.”

Politics is still part of their life, too: son Ben Quayle was elected to Congress representing Arizona’s 3rd congressional district in 2010.

The Quayles’ gift is part of the law school’s IMPACT campaign aimed at increasing resources for student scholarships, faculty development, centers of excellence and experiential learning programs.

— Dan Quayle, ‘74

JOHN RENDER, '71, CONFESSES that a recent gift to the law school from his law firm has an element of self-interest.

“We do have a slightly ulterior motive,” Render says. “We want to be able to continue to recruit the very best graduates.”

Hall Render Killian Heath & Lyman, based in Indianapolis and with more than 150 attorneys and offices in Wisconsin, Kentucky and Michigan, is one of the nation’s top health care law firms. Hall Render partners made the $200,000 gift to the law school’s $12 million dollar IMPACT Campaign to benefit the William S. and Christine S. Hall Center for Law and Health intended to support the center’s excellence in research initiatives and health law education.

The Hall Center for Law and Health—already a top-ranked program—should continue to attract top law students and scholars. The law school’s strength in health law is one more important factor in building Indiana’s reputation as a major player in the biomedical field with a respected medical school and major industry muscle from companies like Eli Lilly and Co. and several major hospital corporations, according to William Thompson ‘87 the firm’s president.

“We would like to see it continue to grow into a destination program,” Thompson says.

But the gift also reflects a legacy of support and loyalty that began with the late William S. Hall ’51, whose work as general counsel to the Indiana Hospital Association led to the firm’s founding in 1971.

Hall—along with Render, Thompson and scores of other attorneys in the firm—are grateful for the law school’s commitment to providing an evening program.

“I would not be here without that opportunity,” says Render, who taught high school English and history during the day before rushing off to law school classes in the evening. “Many of us can say that.”

Sharon Merriman, ’75, funded the Merriman Family Scholarship via a $100,000 charitable gift annuity that gives her income for life, a tax break, and creates the opportunities she wants for students. She is an attorney with Voyles Zahn Paul Hogan & Merriman.

SHARON MERRIMAN KNOWS MOMS MAKE GREAT ATTORNEYS. Yet the road to becoming an attorney—law school—means buying books, paying for a sitter, covering tuition, and juggling the many unexpected expenses that can drain the bank account of a student who is also caring for children. She knows because she was once such a student. That’s why she created the Merriman Family Scholarship, which helps IU School of Law – Indianapolis students, specifically mothers, through law school.

“My advice to mothers in law school would be clichéd,” she says. “This too will pass. Grit your teeth and get through it. Keep your eye on the goal.”

Sharon enrolled in the IU School of Law – Indianapolis in 1972. At that time, she was one of just a handful of women attending. “We hung together,” she says of her female classmates. “We had study groups together.”

However, Sharon was different from her classmates in another way: She began school years after completing her undergraduate degree. Sharon married young and had two daughters. After living abroad for two years, she found herself with a home and a family, and with a strong urge to do more.

“I was bored,” she says. “And I’ll admit that at the time I wasn’t too pleasant to be with.” Roger, Sharon’s husband, challenged her to “stop complaining and do something about it.” I give him credit for that.”

Sharon chose law school, but along the way she still took care of her family, as was the norm at the time. “The deal was that it was okay for me to go to law school as long as I came back and had dinner on the table,” she says. Roger, who has since passed away, would later apologize for not recognizing how much work that meant for his wife.

Sharon graduated in 1975 and dove into family law because she felt it was where she could do the most good. At times, that meant getting involved in helping families navigate very personal issues. “I talked to other attorneys about how they maintained a dispassionate approach,” she says. “I never could work like that. I was up at 2 a.m., worrying about what was going to happen to someone’s kids.”

Today, Sharon practices general law in Indiana and has maintained a practice throughout her career. Moreover, she inspired her own children to follow in her footsteps. “When my first daughter graduated, we were the first mother-daughter lawyers in the state,” she says. “When my second daughter graduated, we were the first mother-daughters in the state.”

These days, Sharon sees that there are more women students. And she knows that those who are mothers are often juggling school and children by themselves. “They are the ones who need a little bit of extra help,” she says. “That’s why I think this scholarship is important.”

Sharon funded her scholarship via a charitable gift annuity that gives her income for life, a tax break, and creates the opportunities she wants for students. “I have no doubt that my gift will help other people in ways that I feel are important,” she says. “It’s a win-win for me and the students. I can’t think of a single downside.”

Students Give Their Time and Talent

In February, members of the Indiana Law Review made no-sew fleece blankets that they distributed to foster children (by guardians ad litem affiliated with Child Advocates, Inc.) for their 2011 service project. The Conour Atrium was turned into “production central,” for the blankets.

IP Pioneer Gives Back to Alma Mater

By Alicia Dean Carlson

TWENTY-NINE YEARS AFTER HIS OWN GRADUATION FROM LAW SCHOOL, Mark Roesler ’82 takes pride in the fact that at least 250 interns—over 100 from his alma mater—have gotten their legal feet wet at Indianapolis—based CMG Worldwide.

“So many people have come through here,” says Roesler. “It gives me a feeling of accomplishment and pride that we can be involved in young people’s lives and careers.”

Roesler and his wife, Stacey, are continuing that involvement with a $75,000 gift to the law school’s Center for Intellectual Property Law and Innovation to encourage continued excellence in research and teaching as part of the larger IMPACT fund-raising campaign.

“I’m pleased that the law school is becoming recognized in emerging areas of the law,” such as intellectual property law, Roesler says. “Stacey and I hope that with this gift, the Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis will continue to strengthen its vast powerhouse of intellectual property knowledge for its students, so they can have the opportunity to benefit from this education just as I did.”

Roesler is widely credited with helping to create a nearly $1 billion licensing industry through his representation of celebrities—both dead and alive—and guarding the intellectual property rights of ubiquitous slogans such as I ♥ NY.

CMG, since its inception, has been the business agent for many of the world’s most recognizable names and faces, including Elvis Presley, Marilyn Monroe, James Dean, Clark Gable, Jackie Robinson, Neil Armstrong, Bettie Page and Malcolm X.

John R. Schaibley, III, executive director of the Center for Intellectual Property Law and Innovation, says that students who have interned at CMG report that the work is fascinating and sometimes seems even glamorous.

“Mark Roesler is a true legal pioneer who established meaningful legal protection for the posthumous right of publicity. The law school is incredibly honored by our association with Mark and CMG Worldwide,” says Schaibley, who, as an intellectual property litigator at Baker & Daniels, worked in this area and had the opportunity to observe its evolution for 30 years. “Roesler is known, not just for his business success or his unparalleled client list, but because of the groundbreaking nature of his substantive legal work, including his master-minding of landmark lawsuits and his persuasive advocacy resulting in state statutory protection for the right of publicity.”

Although Roesler spends much of his time in CMG’s Los Angeles offices, he’s happy to return to Indianapolis, where the CMG Worldwide headquarters is also home to the Legends Museum, a trove of celebrity treasures that includes sports and music memorabilia, gowns worn by Monroe and Bette Davis and other artifacts of American culture.

The company’s roots are firmly planted in Indiana, says Roesler.

“It is home for me, but I feel like I’m on vacation when I come back to Indiana,” he says. “I love it. I get up in the morning and can’t wait to come to work here. You can’t ask for more than that.”
The Center for Intellectual Property Law and Innovation has been involved in a variety of activities with the legal community, government entities, and businesses during the past six months.

International Visitors, December 20, 2010

On December 20, a delegation of lawyers from Pakistan visited the law school and toured the IP Center. The group was invited by the State Department through its International Visitor Leadership Program, and focused on learning more about IP rights in the US. The delegation was accompanied by two State Department officers and two representatives of the International Center of Indianapolis. At the law school, they met with Dean Gary R. Roberts, Professor Emily Morris, Professor John Schaibley, director of the IP Center, and Eric Volz, an officer of the student intellectual property association. While in Indianapolis, they also visited Eli Lilly and Dow Agro, the NCAA, the FBI, and the Woodard, Emhart law firm. ISPA

ISBA IP Section Reception
January 27, 2011

On January 27, the IP Section of the Indiana State Bar Association (ISBA) hosted a reception at the center, to strengthen ties between the center, the school’s IP students, and members of the bar working in the intellectual property area. Russ Fowler, chair of the IP section, presented center director, John Schaibley, with a check in support of the center’s programs. “We greatly appreciate the generosity of the IP Section of the ISBA and look forward to future collaborations,” Professor Schaibley said.

IP Featured Speaker, April 12, 2011

On April 12, Kevin Erdman, a senior partner at Baker & Daniels, LLP, spoke to students with an interest in intellectual property law at the school’s IP Center. His informative and entertaining presentation was on the subject of digital copying of copyrighted material, including an analysis of Digital Millennium Copyright Act and Communications Decency Act statutory liability issues, the Napster-Grokster contributory/inducement opinions, and the social network policies that are in effect with the major sites. Erdman is a distinguished IP attorney who has been honored repeatedly in the area of Intellectual Property law by The Best Lawyers in America and Indiana Super Lawyers. He practices primarily in information, Internet and intellectual property (patent, trademark and copyright) law.

With the theme Human Rights Defenders: Voices from the Community, academics, union leaders, and youth activists commemorated International Human Rights Day at IU Law Indianapolis on Dec. 3, 2010. Professor George E. Edwards, Carl M. Gray Professor of Law and Director of the Program in International Human Rights Law, co-hosted and moderated the event commemorating the adoption and proclamation by the UN General Assembly of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights on Dec. 10, 1948.

Professor Edwards stressed that “the participants in this year’s Universal Declaration of Human Rights Celebration event are the ones who truly make human rights a concrete, living reality for everyone. The human rights workers here with us, tirelessly and selflessly serve our community, nation, and globe. These advocates are committed to defending human rights for every person,” Professor Edwards said. “We salute our Indianapolis human rights defenders on this important occasion where we celebrate the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights.”

Welcoming the participants on behalf of the law school, Perfecto Caparas, PIHRL program manager, underscored the critical importance of “claiming your voice for empowerment and to achieve impact and change.”

Speakers included Dr. Ian McIntosh, IUPUI Director of International Partnerships, and hunger striker Isaias Guerrero, of the Latino/a Youth Collective, who spoke about migrant youth in the U.S. working for the passage of the Development Relief and Education for Alien Minors (DREAM) Act. Also speaking were labor organizer Liam Roche, Robert Pedersen and Allison Luth, both from Central Indiana Jobs with Justice; Dr. Marquita Walker, IUPUI Labor Studies Program; Raio Krishnayya, executive director of the Center for Victim and Human Rights; Ntsika Fakudze, IU Law LL.M. International Human Rights Law track student, and Kevin Muñoz, Human Rights Works. Avril Rua, Master of Laws Association president, emceed the event.

The IUPUI Office of International Affairs and IUPUI Democracy Plaza co-hosted the event. The following law student organizations also served as co-sponsors: International Human Rights Law Society; Equal Justice Works; and Master of Laws Association. Community organizations that sponsored the event included the Center for Victim and Human Rights and Human Rights Works.
“Nations have obligations to their citizens, and obligations to the international community,” remarked Professor George E. Edwards during a panel discussion with North African and Middle Eastern legal luminaries, who visited the law school on March 25.

The event was titled “Rule of International Human Rights Law: North African & Middle Eastern Issues, Advocacies & Perspectives.” It was co-sponsored by several law student organizations, including the Black Law Students’ Association, International Human Rights Law Society, International Law Society, Human Rights Students’ Association, and the Master of Laws Association. Also co-sponsoring the event were two Indianapolis not-for-profit organizations that were founded by law school graduates: the Center for Victim and Human Rights, as well as Human Rights Works.

Professor Edwards hosted the discussion among judges, parliamentarians and legal officers from Iraq, Jordan, Sudan, Saudi Arabia, and the West Bank. Participants touched on a wide range of issues involving the rule of law in the U.S. and other countries. The visiting dignitaries also spoke about their observations over the previous two weeks as they toured the U.S., meeting with government officials, academicians, and private citizens.

Professor Edwards shared stories about numerous projects sponsored by the school's Program in International Human Rights Law (PIHRL), which he directs. He mentioned that the Program has sponsored over 100 internship placements in over 50 countries on six continents since 1997. Former interns spoke at the panel discussion, as did students who had prepared shadow reports for the UN, reporting on human rights violations across the globe.

The delegates were in this country through the U.S. Department of State's International Leadership Visitor Program, and were sponsored by the International Center of Indianapolis. They included Ms. Nafaal Nn Danon Al-Taee, president, Mosul Bar Association (Iraq); Ms. Amal Yousef Al Rfoo, member of parliament (Jordan); Ms. Awour Moyak Deng Koul, judge, Southern Sudan Judiciary (Sudan); and Mr. Raed Theeb Najj Asaf, judge (West Bank).

Perfecto Boyet Caparas, PIHRL program manager, was the primary organizer. Ms. Maryvonne Kerzabi, director of the International Visitor Programs of the International Center of Indianapolis, coordinated the visit.

Professor Edwards is the Carl M. Gray Professor of Law and the Founding Director of the school’s Program in International Human Rights Law. His recent research projects include LL.M. Roadmap to U.S. Law Schools: An International Student’s Guide to U.S. Master of Laws Degree Programs (Aspen / Wolters Kluwer Law and Business Publishing, 380 pages, spring 2011 expected release date). Professor Edwards served as the Director of the school's LL.M. Track in International Human Rights Law from its inception until 2011.

Professors Mary Wolf, Susanah Mead, ’76, and Eleanor DeArman Kinney, were honored at a retirement reception on May 3. In keeping with tradition, they each were presented with an engraved chair honoring them for their service to the school. They also each received a commemorative brick from the former law school building, where they spent the largest part of their tenure as faculty members.

Professor Emeritus Mary Wolf chatted with Jack Mead and Professor Emeritus Tom Allington, while Professor Cynthia Baker caught up with Professor Emeritus Larrie Wilkins.

The commemorative brick from the former law school building that was presented to each retiree.
Professor and former Interim Dean, Susanah M. Mead, graduated from the IU School of Law – Indianapolis in 1976, when women students were by far the minority. After graduation she clerked for the Honorable Paul H. Buchanan Jr., chief judge of the Indiana Court of Appeals, from 1976 to 1978. After clerking, she joined the law school faculty as a lecturer in the legal writing program, which she directed from 1980-81. In June 2005, Mead became the first woman and the first graduate to lead the school, serving as Interim Dean until 2007. Her previous experience in administration was as Associate Dean for Academic Affairs, a post she held from 1997 to 2004. Her articles examining issues in constitutional tort law and products liability law have appeared in national law journals. She was honored as Outstanding Alumna of the Year by the law school’s Alumnae Network in 2007.

Her colleague and friend, Professor Andrew R. Klein, says, “Susie became a role model to a generation of law students and faculty. Indeed, it is impossible to find a person whose path she crossed who doesn’t admire her. Talk to someone who knows Susie Mead, and you will hear about her honesty, her judgment, and her discretion. You will hear that she is a terrific teacher and scholar, but an even better person.”

Arriving at the law school a few years after Mead, Professor Eleanor DeArman Kinney joined the faculty in 1984 and has guided the law school’s nationally recognized Hall Center for Law and Health since she pioneered its establishment in 1987.

The Hall Render Professor of Law, she has taught at the IU School of Law – Indianapolis for 27 years. In addition to health law, she has taught administrative law, law and public health, comparative EU and U.S. regulation of pharmaceuticals and medical technology, insurance law, torts, and law and social science. As co-director of Hall Center for Law and Health and the co-director of the Consortium for Health, Policy, Law & Bioethics, she has created many opportunities for students to work on cutting-edge health law issues, such as malpractice reform.

Professor David Orentlicher, who has co-directed the Hall Center with Kinney since he joined the faculty in 1990, says of his colleague and friend, “Professor Kinney has made substantial contributions in the field of health care law. She has published important scholarship on medical malpractice, administrative processes for resolving concerns of patients, access to health care for the working poor, and the basic human right to health care. Her leadership as a scholar has been matched by her leadership as a mentor of health care lawyers. The top echelons of the health care law bar in Indianapolis, as well as health care lawyers at hospitals, drug companies and governmental agencies have been mentored by Professor Kinney, and the development of the law school’s certificate program in health care will ensure that the law school continues its role developing skilled health care lawyers for generations to come.”

Like Professor Kinney, Professor Mary Wolf arrived at the law school in 1984 as a visiting assistant professor in the newly-created Civil Practice Clinic. She served as director of all clinical programs and externships from July 1987 to December 2010. After earning her J.D. degree, she was clerk to Judge Robert Downing of the Illinois Appellate Court, and then worked as an attorney for the Flood Relief Center and for the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration. In 1979, she joined the staff of Prairie State Legal Services, where she became the managing attorney. During the spring of 2001, Professor Wolf was a visiting professor at TC Beirne School of Law in Australia. In addition to the clinic, her areas of expertise include teaching law and poverty, interviewing and counseling.

Fellow Clinical Professors of Law, Joanne Orr and Fran Watson, describe Wolf as the “heart and soul of the law clinic.” They say, “Mary and her students served as co-counsel to low-income clients referred from Indiana Legal Services in matters of general civil litigation, including family law, landlord tenant, and consumer law litigation…. Within the live-client model, Mary and student co-counsels provided much needed access to the legal system to thousands of real-world clients, benefiting clients, students, and the pursuit of justice for all.” They also point out, “Professor Wolf’s continuing service contributions included membership on the Indiana Supreme Court Pro Bono Commission, and participation in the Juvenile Justice Project and the Domestic Violence Protective Order Pro Bono Project. Her colleagues say, “Mary Wolf was not only an exemplary teacher and lawyer, she was a law school colleague in the truest sense of the word.”

Professors Mead, Kinney and Wolf have devoted the better part of the last three to four decades to our law school community and we wish them well in the next phase of their lives. They have earned a special place in the law school family.
1– The crowd toasted the retirees.
2– Professor Andy Klein showed off a gift from Professor Mead—a stash of multiple choice questions from past torts exams.
3– Professors Maria Pabon Lopez and Dan Cole, both of whom will be departing the law school this summer, were also presented with gifts of “chairs” from Dean Roberts. Professor Lopez leaves to take the dean’s position at Loyola University New Orleans College of Law, and Professor Cole has accepted a joint appointment at the IU Maurer School of Law, the IU School of Public and Environmental Affairs, and the Workshop in Political Theory and Policy, working with Professor and Nobel Prize recipient, Elinor Ostrom, at IU Bloomington.
FACULTY, ALUMNI AND FRIENDS GATHERED at the 12th Annual Outstanding Alumna of the Year Luncheon on April 8, to honor Bette J. Dodd, ’83 for her many contributions to women in the law school community and the legal profession.

Her long-time colleague and fellow alumnus, Jack Wickes, ’75, gave a tribute to Dodd at the event which took place in the boardroom of the Indiana History Center in downtown Indianapolis. Wickes, the Managing Director at Lewis & Kappes, was instrumental in hiring Dodd at the firm in 1995.

He began his tribute by quoting Nelson Mandela, who said, “A good head and a good heart are a formidable combination.” Wickes went on to say, “Bette Dodd has a good head and a great heart.”

Bette Dodd is a director with the law firm of Lewis & Kappes, P.C., where she concentrates her practice in the areas of municipal and public utility law litigation, both regulated and unregulated, local government litigation and municipal finance. She has represented municipal and not-for-profit utilities in all aspects related to utility services. She also has represented various customer classes in utility rate cases, cost of service issues and rate design issues in proceedings before the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission and Indiana trial and appellate courts. Dodd has defended engineers and contractors regarding the design and construction of water and wastewater facilities and municipalities regarding challenges to water, sewer and stormwater projects and rates. She also has represented municipalities in territorial disputes, including appeals at the Indiana Court of Appeals and Indiana Supreme Court. Dodd has represented numerous entities in utility contract litigation and negotiations.

A magna cum laude graduate of the law school in 1983, she also holds a B.A. degree from IU. She has been named to the list of “Indiana Super Lawyer (Utilities)” in 2004, 2005, 2007, 2008, and 2009.

After law school, she clerked for Indiana Supreme Court Justice Donald H. Hunter, and U.S. District Court Judge, William E. Steckler (Southern District of Indiana). Before joining Lewis & Kappes in 1995, she worked at Ice Miller from 1986-1995. Dodd is admitted to the bars of Indiana; the U.S. Supreme Court; the U.S. Court of Appeals (Seventh Circuit, Eleventh Circuit, Eighth Circuit); the U.S. District Court, Southern District of Indiana, and the U.S. District Court, Northern District of Indiana.

An active member of the community, she serves as a Fellow of the Indianapolis Bar Association; Chair of the Government Practice Section of the Indiana State Bar Association, and former Chair of its Utility Law Section, Electricity Division and Utility Services/Consumer Division of the Utility Law Section. She is a member of the American Bar Association, the National Association of Bond Lawyers and the Indiana Municipal Lawyers Association. She is a board member, Salt Creek Services, Inc.; and a past volunteer judge for the Moot Court and Client Counseling Competitions at the IU School of Law – Indianapolis.

This year a special award was also given to Women’s Caucus for the work the student organization has done over the years. Vice Dean Paul Cox presented Kim Jewell, 3L evening student and current Chair of the student group, with a plaque. Jewell said, “I gratefully accept on behalf of all past and present Women’s Caucus members. Bette and her classmates’ efforts paved the way for the work that Women’s Caucus has not only done in the past, but what we continue to do in the present, and look forward to doing in the future.”

The Alumnae Network, which sponsors the Outstanding Alumna of the Year event, is a forum for women graduates to connect with each other, current students and the law school community. For more information about the Alumnae Network or to nominate someone for the Outstanding Alumna of the Year Award, please contact Angela Rager, ’99 at arrager@iupui.edu.

Reception Honors Clinic and Pro Bono Program Students

On Thursday, April 14, students from the school’s clinical and pro bono programs were honored for their outstanding work. The reception in the Conour Atrium featured keynote speaker, Chuck Dunlap, ’96, Executive Director of the Indiana Bar Foundation.

Ida Coleman Lamberti, ’92, received a Pro Bono Service Award from the law school and the Heartland Pro Bono Council for her work in the community. The award was presented by Hon. David Shaheed, ’84, Marion Superior Court. The John Paul Berlon Award was presented to Martsyl Joseph, who contributed over 400 service hours while in law school. Additionally, she served as co-chair for the Street Law program, president of the Black Law Students Association, and volunteered with the following agencies: Marion County Juvenile Court’s Guardian Ad Litem Program; Mentor, Aftercare in Indiana Through Mentoring Program (AIM), and Volunteer, IUPUI Good Friends Program.

Professor Joel Schumm, ’98, presented the Outstanding Clinic Student Award to Ryan Lighty. According to Professor Schumm, Ryan did outstanding work in the Appellate Clinic last fall.

“Ryan never complained as he worked tirelessly on a brief and later a reply brief that argued there was insufficient evidence that our client had taken two boxes of bus passes from the Department of Child Services, where she had worked as a clerk… Ryan did a masterful job of arguing the many things the State did not prove and the numerous things the witnesses did not say or do. We requested oral argument, which was scheduled in February, the semester after Ryan had completed his clinic work. Nevertheless, he spent more than 70 hours preparing for an oral argument, including moot arguments with law faculty, public defenders, and appellate lawyers at a large downtown firm,” Schumm said. This all paid off as he did a masterful job at oral argument. In April the Court issued an opinion reversing our client’s conviction. This was her only felony conviction, and Ryan’s work not only vindicated her name but will make an enormous difference in the opportunities she can pursue for years to come,” he added.

Perfecto Caparas also recognized students who contributed to UN Reports through the school’s Program in International Human Rights Law.
IUAA Operation LAWS (Law Alumni Working with Students) Event:

Damages: A Simulated Interdisciplinary Learning Experience

On March 8, the IU Schools of Law, Medicine, Dentistry and Social Work Alumni Associations combined forces to present “Damages: A Simulated Interdisciplinary Learning Experience for Attorneys, Doctors, Dentists, and Social Workers” at Inlow Hall. The program was a medical malpractice trial re-enactment that was followed by a networking reception for students and alumni. The program received an IUAA Constituent Society Award for Outstanding Student Engagement.

1– A networking reception in the Conour Atrium followed the “Damages” CLE program.

2– Audience members listened during the trial re-enactment.

3– The program received an IUAA Constituent Society Award for Outstanding Student Engagement.
The second annual Student Appreciation Day took place on November 11 and included a variety of activities for the student body. In addition to snacks offered in the atrium throughout the day, students were treated to chair massages from professional massage therapists, pizza, and the opportunity to play games on a Wii system.

Special recognition was given to students who are active or retired members of the military, in honor of Veterans Day. Student Appreciation Day was organized by a committee of student services personnel, headed by Assistant Dean Chasity Thompson.

President, IU School of Law–Indianapolis Alumni Association
Life Member, IU Alumni Association

“Someone recently asked me why I stayed involved with the law school and the alumni association. I wasn’t sure where to begin. The students I’ve met through the mock interview program and NCAA externship are not only impressive, but future contributors to the legal profession and community. Quite simply, the students are inspiring.

I’m humbled to be among my fellow alumni ranging from state leaders to professionals who have dedicated their careers to helping those in need of pro bono representation. Our law school produces leaders and our alumni represent the best who remain loyal and committed to advancing our students and school.”

Law school alumnus and adjunct professor, John Krauss, ’76, presented the school with a color photo he shot of the courtroom of the Indiana Supreme Court. The Court has been hearing cases in this courtroom since 1888, when the present Indiana State House was completed. No other state supreme court in the country has heard cases in the same place for this length of time. The photo is displayed in the law school’s Conour Atrium.

Drugs Law Expert Receives McDonald-Merrill-Ketcham Award

On March 24, Professor Alta Charo of the University of Wisconsin received the annual McDonald-Merrill-Ketcham (MMK) Award and delivered the MMK award lecture. The topic was “Challenges for Drug Safety,” and was part of the Indiana Health Law Review Symposium which also included a panel discussion on the same subject. Professor David Orentlicher, Rosen Professor of Law and co-director of the Hall Center for Law and Health, moderated the panel which included Dean D. Craig Brater, M.D. of the IU School of Medicine; Dr. Paul Helft, M.D., Director of the Charles Warren Fairbanks Center for Medical Ethics; Professor Emily Morris, J.D., Associate Professor of Law and Dean’s Fellow at IU School of Law – Indianapolis; and Professor Ralph Hall, J.D., Visiting Professor of Law at IU School of Law – Indianapolis, teaching specialist at the University of Minnesota School of Law, and counsel to the law firm of Baker & Daniels in Indianapolis.

Co-directors of the Hall Center for Law and Health, Professors Eleanor Kinney and David Orentlicher, presented Charo with the MMK Award. Kinney says, “Dr. Charo’s talk clearly explained the challenges to drug safety today. In health care, this is a crucial issue as more and more new and promising medicines come onto the market.”

In conjunction with the Indiana University School of Medicine, the law school sponsors the annual McDonald-Merrill-Ketcham Memorial Lectureship and Award for Excellence in Law and Medicine. Supported by a bequest to the two schools, this lectureship and award brings leading scholars and policy makers in the fields of law and medicine to the Indianapolis campus for the benefit of students, faculty, the bar and the medical community. First held in 1994, articles from the lectures have been published in both the Indiana Law Review and the Indiana Health Law Review.
Indiana Law Review Explores “What Ifs” at Annual Symposium

At the Indiana Law Review Symposium on April 1, speakers and panelists explored counterfactuals in constitutional history—the “what ifs” or “turning points” in constitutional law. Leading constitutional law scholars from across the nation gathered to discuss their favorite constitutional turning points from American history and presented their views of how a different outcome would have impacted subsequent legal developments or issues.

Following a welcome by Dean Gary Roberts, Kate Mercer-Lawson, law review editor, and Professor Gerard Magliocca, law review advisor, experts in constitutional law spoke on a variety of issues. Presentations included, “Elena Kagan and the Conservative Movement” by David Fontana, George Washington University Law School; “The Counterfactual that Came to Pass: What If the Founders had Not Constitutionalized the Privilege of the Writ of Habeas Corpus??” by Amanda Tyler, George Washington University Law School, and “What If Kelo Had Gone the Other Way?” by Ilya Somin, George Mason University School of Law. Other topics were “What If Madison Had Really Won?: Legislative vs. Judicial Supremacy,” by Alison LaCroix, University of Chicago; “What If Slaughterhouse Had Been Decided Differently?” by Kim Roosevelt, University of Pennsylvania Law School; “What if Daniel Ellsberg Hadn’t Bothered?” by Heidi Kitrosser, University of Minnesota School of Law School, and “What if Chief Justice Fred Vinson Hadn’t Died in 1953?” by Carlton Larson, University of California, Davis. The symposium editor was Amanda L. B. Mulrooney.

1– Professor Amanda Tyler of George Washington University Law School was a featured speaker.
2– Professor Ilya Somin of George Mason University School of Law spoke on “What if Kelo had gone the Other Way?”
3– More than 80 people attended the one-day event.
4– Law review editor-in-chief, Kate Mercer-Lawson, welcomed guests.
PROFESSOR ROBERT PAPE, an expert in international security, spoke at the law school on March 3 on the topic, “Cutting the Fuse: Moving Beyond the War on Terror.” A professor of political science at the University of Chicago, Pape is the author of Cutting the Fuse, a book offering a wealth of new knowledge about the origins of suicide terrorism and strategies to stop it. The book, co-authored with James K. Feldman, and the Chicago Project on Security and Terrorism, examines every suicide terrorist attack worldwide from 1980 to 2009, nearly 2,200 attacks in all. Their work fundamentally changes how we understand the root causes of the most important terrorist campaigns today and reveals that America’s “War on Terror” has been frustrating and at times counterproductive.

Professor Pape’s lecture was co-sponsored by the Indiana University School of Public and Environmental Affairs (SPEA) and the alumni association of the University of Chicago.
Law School Team Participates in EU Moot Court Competition

Once again, the IU School of Law – Indianapolis EU Moot Court Team was one of the 48 teams worldwide to qualify for the regional finals, which took place in Barcelona, Spain from February 17-19. The team, which consisted of Susan Riede, Zoe Meier, Kristen Hunsberger, and Mark Shope, was one of the few U.S. teams to proceed to the oral competition, thanks to their dedication and many late nights of preparation through the Fall semester. The roles of Applicant, Defendant and Advocate General were divided among the team members. Each participant did a great job and strongly argued against his/her counterparts from competing European teams.

Team member Susan Riede summed up the experience, “Unfortunately, the IU team was not one of the four to be selected to proceed to the next round of the competition, but we were quite proud of ourselves and were congratulated for making it to the oral rounds. Each of us received a certificate and lasting memories from this once-in-a-lifetime experience. Most of us were able to spend a little extra time in Europe to relax after the stress and long hours of commitment to the competition. It was a most memorable experience and most rewarding for our dedication to the studies of EU law through two semesters of EU classes and individual studies and research regarding the EU moot court competition case.”

IN TODAY’S ECONOMY, ONE CAN HARDLY IMAGINE A DAY WITHOUT ENERGY. From home appliances and computers to heating systems and the vehicles we use to commute and transport materials and products, we need energy sources to generate power and sustain our lives and economy. Yet traditional sources of power are increasingly vulnerable. America relies chiefly on fossil fuels that are acquired at a rising economic, societal, and public health costs. Our energy supplies are ever more expensive and at risk. And the price we pay enriches foreign powers that do not always share American interests. Energy is one of the greatest national security challenges facing our country today. But energy is not a problem that can be addressed by the federal government acting alone. State and local governments and their citizens have a unique responsibility to shape their energy policy in a way that will advance national security.

On March 25, a symposium on “National Energy Security: Challenges and Opportunities for the Midwest,” was co-hosted by the IU Law – Indianapolis Environmental Policy Forum and the Richard G. Lugar Center for Renewable Energy. The program included state leaders, entrepreneurs, and environmental experts discussing the energy security challenge.

The symposium began by addressing national energy security issues and reviewing how those issues affect Midwestern states. This initial discussion was followed by panels on transit and the power grid that highlighted specific opportunities and innovations in these two important energy policy areas.

Speakers included law school dean, Gary R. Roberts; Alan Jones, Director, Richard G. Lugar Center for Renewable Energy at the Purdue School of Engineering and Technology at IUPUI; Professor Eric Dannenmaier, Chair of the Environmental Policy Forum, IU Law – Indianapolis; David Catarious, Director of Research, Energy and Climate Program, Pew Environment Group of The Pew Charitable Trusts; Honorable Beverly Gard, Chair, Energy and Environmental Affairs Committee, Indiana State Senate; Jesse Kharbanda, Executive Director, Hoosier Environmental Council; Keven Brubaker, Deputy Director, Environmental Law and Policy Center, Chicago; Tim Maloney, Senior Policy Director, Hoosier Environmental Council; Ehren Bingaman, Executive Director, Central Indiana Regional Transportation Authority; Steve Kozey, Vice President and General Counsel, Midwest ISO; and Robert Bradish, Managing Director, Transmission Asset Planning and Advanced Studies, American Electric Power. Moderators included David McGimpsey, Bingham McHale; David Craig, Associate Professor, Department of Religious Studies, IU School of Liberal Arts; and Travis Murphy, Johnson Melloh Solutions.

1- David Catarious, Director of Research for the Energy and Climate Program of the Pew Environment Group of The Pew Charitable Trusts, spoke on energy security and the Midwest.

3- Gregory Dunn, '89, chatted with Jesse Kharbanda of the Hoosier Environmental Council and Kevin Brubaker, of the Environmental Law and Policy Center.

4- Professor Eric Dannenmaier discussed the impact of energy issues and how they relate to national security.

5- More than 100 people attended the March 25th event in the Wynne Courtroom.

Students from the law school’s Environmental Law Society and Energy Law Association assisted with the coordination of the event. A reception following the symposium took place in the school’s faculty lounge.
EJW Honors Alumni and Raises Money for Loan Repayment
FORMER INDIANA SUPREME COURT JUSTICE
THEODORE R. BOEHM GAVE THE KEYNOTE
ADDRESS at the Third Annual Public Interest Recognition
Dinner on April 9 in the Conour Atrium of Inlow Hall. This year’s event raised $15,000 for the school’s Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP) endowment, which helps graduates of IU School of Law – Indianapolis working in public interest to repay their student loans.

Approximately 150 attended the event that honored alumni working in public interest law. This year’s honorees were Hon. David Shaheed, ’84, Marion Superior Court; Gil Holmes, ’99, Executive Director of American Civil Liberties Union - Indiana; and Brita Horvath, ’02, Diversity and Pro Bono Manager, Baker & Daniels.

LRAP was established because low-income individuals and families face legal problems associated with their most basic needs—food, housing, healthcare, personal safety and education—yet attorneys trained to assist them are limited in number and overwhelmed with clients. A significant number of students at the law school consider careers in public interest law. However, their goals are often frustrated by the increasing size of post-graduation debt.

For a school with an established pro bono program, instituting a well-funded Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP) ensures that graduates can afford to pursue public service careers consistent with their efforts during law school. Establishing an LRAP through donations is an efficient response to the needs and aspirations of graduates, as well as the challenges facing the local and national community. ■
Luncheons Bring the Law School and the Legal Community Together

Each year, the law school hosts several lunches that bring together students, faculty, administrators and members of the legal community to discuss the school as well as issues of interest related to the profession. During the spring semester, the school hosted two “Entrepreneurial Luncheons” giving students an opportunity to meet alumni who have achieved success in the business field. On February 10, the school hosted Steve Stitle, ’70, Regional President, Indiana, PNC Financial Services Group, Inc.; and on April 6, Steve Henke, ’77, co-founder and owner, Throgmartin-Henke Development, LLP, visited the school.

On April 7, the school hosted several managing partners and other representatives from local law firms to update them about law school developments and initiatives.

1– Steve Stitle, ’70, (left) chatted with Dean Gary Roberts prior to the luncheon on February 10.
2– Steve Henke ’77, met with students Melinda Mains, Davey Neal and John Westhoff during the second Entrepreneurial Luncheon of the 2011 Spring semester.
3– Dean Gary Roberts talked with George Yund of Frost Brown Todd at the Managing Partners Luncheon on April 7.
Tickets to the 2011 Barrister’s Ball sold out quickly, as students, faculty and staff made plans to attend the law school’s annual formal dinner and dance. The event took place on March 26 at the Crowne Plaza in the Historic Union Station. Following a cocktail hour and dinner, the winners of the Cane awards were announced. The Black Cane Award (best professor) was presented to Professor Andy Klein. The Red Cane (best new professor) recipient was Professor Max Huffman, and the White Cane Award (best administrator) was presented to Carlota Toledo, Associate Director of Student Services.

Also announced were the graduation speakers: Jeff Elftman, day student division; Alex R. Schmitt, evening student division and Jonathan Bashi Rudahindwa, LL.M. student. Commencement hooding ceremony faculty members were also announced at the event: J.D. program hooders were Professors Eric Dannenmaier, Andy Klein, Michael Pitts, and Florence Wagman Roisman; LL.M. program hooders were Professors George Edwards, Frank Emmert and Tom Wilson.

1- Professor Andy Klein, recipient of the Black Cane Award, attended Barrister’s Ball with his wife, Diane Schussel.
2- White Cane Award recipient Carlota Toledo danced the night away with her husband, Jonclair Goncalves.
3- It appears that “a fine time was had by all.”
Lady Justice Program Helps Girl Scouts Learn about Law and Legal Profession

AN IDEA STARTED BY ALUMNA STEPHENIE JOCHAM ’01, CAME TO FRUITION ON SATURDAY, MARCH 26 IN INLOW HALL when 76 Girl Scouts from 23 troops convened for a unique event called “Lady Justice,” co-sponsored by the Women in the Law Committee of the Indiana State Bar Association.

The goal of the event was to teach the girls about the law and about how to become a lawyer or judge. The girls worked toward earning a Scout badge by completing projects on the Bill of Rights, hearing from a panel of successful women attorneys and judges, and observing a mock trial, B.B. Wolf v. Curly Pig (written by Holly Wanzer ’99).

“The Girl Scouts’ Lady Justice program encourages girls to set goals, take control of their futures and understand their rights and responsibilities as citizens. The energy and enthusiasm that participating attorneys and judges put into interacting with the girls will undoubtedly linger in their lives long after the program is over,” says Wanzer.
Excerpts from B.B. Wolf v. Curly Pig by Holly Wanzer

PLAINTIFF’S ATTY: Yes, your honor. Ms. B.B. Wolf will demonstrate that on August 19, 2010, the defendant, Ms. Curly Pig did attempt to cook the plaintiff by setting a trap in her fireplace. The evidence will show that Curly Pig placed a steaming cauldron of boiling water in a spot where she was sure that Ms. Wolf would show up, and that furthermore, Ms. Pig’s cookbook was found open to a recipe for Poached Wolf. Ladies of the jury, the evidence will make clear that Ms. Pig tried to harm Ms. Wolf so that she could eat her!

DEFENDANT’S ATTY: Your honor and ladies of the jury, the charges made by B.B. Wolf are ridiculous! We will show that the cauldron of steaming water was INSIDE Ms. Pig’s home—a home Ms. Wolf was trying to forcibly enter. We will also show that Ms. Wolf’s actions were just the latest in a long series of harassment of the Pig family—harassment that includes the eating of Ms. Pig’s two sisters, Laurie and Bessie. The evidence will demonstrate that Curly Pig was merely protecting her home and her life.

[Plaintiff’s attorney calls the first witness, who is sworn in].

PLAINTIFF’S ATTY: Please state your name for the record.

WOLF: My name is Big Bad Wolf, but my friends call me B.B.

PLAINTIFF’S ATTY: Where do you live B.B.?

WOLF: Oh, I have a nice little den in the woods outside Indianapolis. You know with redwood paneling. It has one bedroom, a living room and a garage.

PLAINTIFF’S ATTY: A kitchen?

WOLF: Well, uh, I eat out a lot, you might say....

PLAINTIFF’S ATTY: Ah yes. Well let’s move on to the morning of August 19, 2010. Do you recall your whereabouts on that morning?
LL.M. Students Host Lunar New Year Celebration

On Friday, February 4, students in the law school’s LL.M. program, in cooperation with the Office of Student Affairs, hosted a celebration of the Lunar New Year in the faculty lounge. Approximately 30 students and faculty attended the event, which served as a welcome to new LL.M. students who started the program with the spring 2011 semester.

Attendees were treated to an authentic Chinese meal and traditional Chinese music. All participants received New Year’s gifts of small red envelopes called Hong Bao. Two students, dressed in traditional New Year attire, gave presentations. Ying Chen talked about Lunar New Year celebrations in China and Tuan Nguyen discussed Lunar New Year practices in Vietnam.

LL.M. student Weiwei Fan commented, “As a Chinese student, it's really nice to celebrate our most important holiday with classmates and professors. I really thank all of the people involved in this celebration, and we had a very nice night.”
Professor Works with Alumnus on Case Before U.S. Supreme Court

On January 12, 2011, Professor Emeritus William E. Marsh delivered his first oral argument before the Supreme Court of the United States in the case Marcus Sykes v. U.S.A., No. 09-11311. Marsh represented Sykes in this case which came from the Southern District of Indiana, where alumnus James C. McKinley, ‘87 had argued the case. The two men worked together on the brief for the Supreme Court, and Marsh gave the argument.

The case hinges on whether fleeing police in a vehicle can be classified as “violent,” thereby leading to an enhanced 188-month prison sentence. A ruling on the case is likely later this year.

After practicing law in Phoenix, Arizona, Professor Emeritus Marsh joined the law school faculty in 1971, where he taught civil rights, constitutional law, and criminal procedure. He also established the law school’s clinical education program over 25 years ago.

Currently the Executive Director of Indiana Public Defenders, Inc., Professor Marsh served as president of the Indiana Civil Liberties Union, and has served as chairman of the board of the Indianapolis Urban League, Inc. As a member of the Indiana Correctional Code Commission, he helped draft the Indiana Corrections Code, chaired the advisory board of the National Moratorium on Prison Construction, and has been actively involved in prison reform litigation.

McKinley is currently an adjunct professor at the law school, teaching criminal procedure. A former law clerk for Indiana Supreme Court Justice Brent E. Dickson, ’68, McKinley was in private practice with a concentration in federal litigation from 1987 to 1999. From 1999 to 2010 he was an assistant federal defender in the Southern District of Indiana and is currently practicing law part time.

Professor Watson and Students from the Wrongful Conviction Clinic Attend International Innocence Network Event

On April 8-10, Kathy McKinney and Jessica Vandivier, students from the law school’s Wrongful Conviction Clinic, joined Professor Fran Watson at the 2011 Innocence Network Conference: An International Exploration of Wrongful Conviction, held in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The school’s Wrongful Conviction Clinic is a founding member of the Innocence Network. Professor Watson moderated the session on “Federal Habeas Corpus: Timelines and Pitfalls,” a panel focusing on the law which impacts federal review on the merits of a constitutional claim, including matters of exhaustion, procedural default, and the statute of limitations.

Professor Watson’s years in practice have involved work as a deputy state public defender at the trial and appellate levels and representation of the police department and elected officials as an assistant corporation counsel for Indianapolis/Marion County. She is a member of the Federal, Indiana, and Indianapolis Bar Associations and a master of the American Inns of Court.

She is a member of the Committee on the Civil Rights of Children for the Indiana State Bar Association, and a member and officer of the Board of Directors of the Indiana Civil Liberties Union and the Craine House, a correctional facility for women. Professor Watson serves on the Board of the IUPUI Forensic Science Initiative.
CYNTHIA ADAMS co-presented on “The Use of Corpora in a Multi-Modal Approach to Teaching Legal English Writing,” at the International Conference on Academic Writing, Tel Aviv, Israel, August 2010. In April, Professor Adams presented a series of lectures on drafting international contracts at Shanghai International Studies University, Law School, in Shanghai, China. In addition, Professor Adams was named Co-Chair of the Legal Writing Institute’s Committee on Cooperation between Clinical/Externships and the Legal Writing Faculty. As a part of 2011 IUPUI Research Day, Professor Adams along with Professor Hagan, prepared and gave a poster presentation on clinical collaboration, which will also be presented at the June 2011 AALS National Clinical Skills Conference in Seattle, Washington.

In her role as faculty member on the Indiana Commission for Higher Education, clinical associate professor of law CYNTHIA BAKER hosted a faculty leadership conference on behalf of the Commission on April 29, 2011. The conference’s topic, Faculty Engagement toward Student Learning Outcomes, addressed the financial, logistical, pedagogical and philosophical issues related to defining quality within higher education and what it means, or should mean, to earn or confer a postsecondary degree. Conference participants were faculty senate presidents and other faculty leaders from Indiana’s public and private colleges and universities.

Baker gave comments entitled, A Faculty Member’s Conundrum: Proving a Highly Educated Student and introduced the keynote speaker, Dr. Carol Geary Schneider, President of the Association of American Colleges and Universities. Dr. Schneider has been a leader in helping our nation, and our nation’s faculty, think about and assess student learning outcomes in higher education. In addition, Baker moderated a panel discussion in response to Dr. Schneider’s remarks, Student Learning Outcomes in Practice. Panelists included faculty representatives from public and private universities in Indiana who are actively involved in various initiatives focused on student learning outcomes including tuning, Degree Qualifications Profiles, and Liberal Education—America’s Promise (LEAP).

While the conference focused on undergraduate education, this work impacts the students admitted to our law schools, the shape of our nation’s many professions, and, ultimately, democracy itself. Held at the University Place Conference Center, the conference is the second of two such faculty leadership conferences hosted by Baker, who was appointed by Governor Daniels to the Commission in 2009. Baker’s two-year appointment to the Commission concludes in June of this year.

Former Chancellor GERALD L. BEPKO authored a tribute to retiring Indiana Supreme Court Justice Theodore Boehm, to be published in the spring issue of the INDIANA LAW REVIEW.

On February 6, Chancellor Bepko spoke to the Indiana University Alumni Association of Southwest Florida on “The Emerging Indiana University” in Naples. He then met with law school alumni at a reception hosted by Dean Gary Roberts and law alumnus Barry L. Meadow, who practices law in Miami. The reception took place in connection with IU’s Winter College in Coral Gables, FL, from February 25-27. IU alumnus and current U.S. Ambassador to Costa Rica, Anne Slaughter Andrew, was the principal speaker at Winter College. Both Anne Slaughter Andrew and Barry Meadow took courses from Professor Bepko when they were in law school.

Michael S. Maurer, for whom the Maurer School of Law was named, has written two books titled 19 Stars of Indiana. The first of those books was published in 2009 and was devoted to 19 exceptional Hoosier women. The second of those books, published in 2010 in connection with the Indiana Historical Society, is devoted to “19 exceptional Hoosier men.” It includes a foreword by IU President Michael McRobbie and incorporates biographical profiles of Hoosiers such as Governor Mitch Daniels; Senator Richard Lugar; Jazz Composer and IU Distinguished Professor of Music David Baker; Notre Dame’s Father Theodore Hesburgh; former Governor Joe Kernan; IU and NBA basketball star George McGinnis; IU Distinguished Professor of Medicine Lawrence Einhorn; Garfield creator Jim Davis; nationally recognized entrepreneur, business leader, historic preservationist, and former IU Trustee, the late Bill Cook; and IU Trustee’s Professor Gerald Bepko.

Professor Bepko gave his Annual Lecture to the Wells Seminar in the Kelley School of Business on February 16 and spoke to the Freshman Honors Class at Kelley on February 17, both on the subject of “Herman Wells and Servant Leadership.” Additionally, he attended the Board Retreat of the Lumina Foundation for Education in San Francisco, March 22-25.

SHAWN BOYNE was awarded an Overseas Research Grant by the IU Office of the Vice President for International Affairs to support her ongoing research in Germany, as well as a Summer Research Stipend from the Max Planck Institute for Foreign & International Criminal Law. She attended the 6th Annual Comparative Law Works in Progress Conference held at Yale Law School on February 11-12. Her paper entitled, “Uncertainty and the Search for Truth at Trial: Defining Prosecutorial Objectivity in German Sexual Assault Cases,” was one of six papers selected for discussion by the American Society of Comparative Law.

KAREN E. BRAVO participated in the symposium, Sovereignty in Today’s World, organized by the Journal of International Law of the Michigan State University College of Law. Held on February 17 – 18, at the College of Law in East Lansing, Michigan, the symposium explored the effects on concepts of state sovereignty of human rights law, intellectual property law, and trade and international economic law, among other modern legal developments. Professor Bravo discussed her research on Challenges to Caribbean Sovereignty in a Globalizing World as a participant on the panel The Surrender of Economic Sovereignty.

Professor Bravo discussed her research on human trafficking and the trans-Atlantic slave trade at the University at Buffalo Law School (SUNY) on March 10. Held at the law school’s Baldy Center for Law and Social Policy, Professor Bravo’s lecture was hosted by the University’s Institute of Research and Education on Women and Gender’s Feminist Research Alliance and was co-sponsored by The Baldy Center for Law and Social Policy. The lecture, “The Role of the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade in Contemporary Anti-Human Trafficking Discourse,” discussed the superficial and exploitative references to and uses of the trans-Atlantic slave trade and slavery in contemporary anti-human trafficking discussions.
Bravo identified trends in the uses of analogies to the prior period of exploitation, and suggested that more thoughtful analyses would reveal structural similarities and lead to the identification of more effective anti-trafficking methodologies.

Professor Bravo participated in the symposium, Which Way Home, organized by the Law Review of the Northern Illinois University College of Law. Held on April 14-15, at the Northern Illinois University in Dekalb, Illinois, the symposium explored global and local aspects of human trafficking, including analysis of various types of trafficking, methodologies employed to combat it and to counteract its effects, as well as policy implications for the future. Professor Bravo discussed her research on Legal Constructions of Personhood: Their Nexus with the Trafficking of Human Beings as a participant on the panel on Policy Implications.

Professor Bravo’s research poster, The Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade in Contemporary Anti-Human Trafficking Discourse, represented the law school at IUPUI Research Day, on April 8, at the IUPUI campus center.

Additionally, Professor Bravo was elected as incoming co-chair of the Teaching International Law Interest Group at the 105th Annual Meeting of the American Society of International Law (Harmony and Dissonance in International Law), in Washington, D.C., March 23 - 26. Established in 1906, the American Society of International Law’s mission is to foster the study of international law and to promote the establishment and maintenance of international relations on the basis of law and justice. The Teaching International Law Interest Group provides a forum for those involved in or interested in teaching international law to discuss approaches, methods, and new techniques taking place both in the United States and abroad. Professor Bravo’s 3-year term commenced at the annual meeting.

JENNIFER DROBAC has made several presentations during the past semester. She was a presenter on “A New Model for Adolescent Consent: Juvenile Legal Assent,” at Santa Clara Law School in Santa Clara, California. On March 18 she presented “The End of the Age of Consent,” at the Adolescent in Society Conference at the Brooklyn Law School in Brooklyn, New York. In May, she presented on “Abandoning Teenage Consent for Legal Assent: Harmonizing Developmental Sciences and the Law,” at the Squaw Valley Conference, Gruter Institute for Law & Behavioral Research, and on “A Mariner’s Tips for Navigating the Sea of Publishing,” at Stanford Law School. Professor Drobac served as an expert witness for DeFreece v. City of Roseville, Placer Superior Court Case No. SCV 26624 (case involving alleged harassment against police officers). Professor Drobac was a visiting professor of law, teaching contracts, family law and juvenile law, at Santa Clara Law School in Santa Clara, California in 2010-2011. She is also a visiting scholar at Berkeley Law, University of California’s Center for the Study of Law and Society, through August of 2011.

Professor Edwards was elected by the students to serve as a “hooder” for the LL.M. 2011 commencement ceremony. Additionally, he was appointed as a Marshall for the law school and campus commencement ceremonies.

FRANK EMMERT, the John S. Grimes Professor of Law and Director of the International and Comparative Law Center, opened a new academic year at the law school’s LL.M. Program in Cairo on January 9. The program admitted 63 students, who will take courses until December 2011 and, following the completion of their Master theses, are scheduled to graduate in the summer of 2012. This new class of students is our largest yet in the Egypt program and brings the total number of participants to 225. Fifty individuals, many of whom are already practicing as judges, prosecutors, and attorneys, have already graduated from the program. Approximately 75 are eligible to graduate in July 2011.

During the Egyptian revolution, the program was temporarily suspended but courses resumed just six weeks later and the law school does not expect a delay with the delivery of the program. Professor Emmert met with the Egyptian Minister of Higher Education on April 19, 2011, regarding the program.

In December 2010, the book, “European Union Law - Documents” 2nd ed., Frank Emmert (ed.), was published by Eleven...
ROBERT KATZ continued his ongoing research project with Professor Page on the legal aspects of social enterprise and social entrepreneurship. The Vermont Law Review published two of their articles in a symposium issue on “Corporate Creativity: The Vermont L3C & Other Developments in Social Entrepreneurship.” The articles were The Role of Social Enterprise, 35 Vt. L. Rev. 59 (2010), and Freezing out Ben & Jerry: Corporate Law and the Sale of a Social Enterprise Icon, 35 Vt. L. Rev. 211 (2010). Professor Katz pursued other interests as well. In October, he joined a small group of experts for a two-day workshop on compensation for victims of terrorism, convened by the Institute for National Security and Counterterrorism at Syracuse University School of Law, to explore programmatic alternatives for compensating victims and to develop policy recommendations. Professor Katz contributed his expertise on charitable assistance and its interaction with compensation schemes that make payments to the same group of victims. In July of 2010, Professor Katz took an intensive Spanish language course at Colegio de España in Salamanca, Spain. “in the wistful hope that this might somehow advance his scholarship, or at least help him communicate better with in-laws.”

ELEANOR KINNEY received the Outstanding Leadership Award at the Veteran Faculty level from the IUPUI Office of Women for 2011. The Indiana Health Law Review established the Eleanor D.
Professor Kinney served as the inaugural speaker for the INTEGRIS Health Law and Medicine Lecture, speaking on “The Real Truth about Death Panels: Comparative Effectiveness Research and Health Reform Legislation,” at the Oklahoma City School of Law, in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma in February. Also that month, she spoke on “Realizing the Human Right to Health for Noncitizens in the U.S.,” at the Symposium on International and Comparative Legal Perspectives on the rights of Non-Citizens, at the Notre Dame School of Law. Her article on that topic can be found at 1 NOTRE DAME JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL, COMPARATIVE & HUMAN RIGHTS LAW 94 (2011).

Professor Kinney, along with Priscilla Keith, received a grant from the Marion County Health and Hospitals Corporation to write an “All Hazards Emergency Operations Plan.” Additionally, Professor Kinney continues to serve on the Steering Committee of the Alliance of Distinguished and Titled Professors at IU.

In January, NORMAN LEFSTEIN, Professor and Dean Emeritus, spoke at a seminar at the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. sponsored by the National Institute of Justice. His subject was “International Perspectives on Delivering Indigent Defense Services.” During the American Bar Association Midyear Meeting in Atlanta in February, he spoke on “Rethinking Indigent Defense and Caseload Challenges,” as part of a program dealing with the fiscal crisis in providing defense services for the poor in criminal and juvenile cases. His remarks, delivered during a 2010 National Public Defense Symposium at the University of Tennessee College of Law, recently were published in 7 TENNESSEE JOURNAL OF LAW & POLICY 43 (2010), and his “Commentary on Indigent Defense” appears in 75 Missouri Law Review 793 (2010). Professor Lefstein also has continued to serve as an expert witness in the case of Missouri Public Defender Commission v. Waters, which is pending before the Missouri Supreme Court. Meanwhile, he is completing a book on caseloads and the delivery of public defense services, which will be published by the American Bar Association later this year.

EMILY MORRIS made a presentation on the Hatch-Waxman Act and the future of pharmaceutical innovation at the Second Asia-Pacific Innovation Conference. The conference took place in May at the National University of Singapore and was hosted both by the National University and by Hitotsubashi University in Tokyo, Japan.

On April 9, Professor Magliocca presented on the topic, “The Constitution Can Do No Wrong,” at University of Illinois Law School.

On February 3, Professor Orentlicher presented a talk in the Faculty Speakers Series at the University of Iowa College of Law for the 2011 Symposium of the American Journal of Law and Medicine. The title of the symposium was “Marketing Health: The Growing Role of Commercial Speech Doctrine in FDA Regulation,” and Professor Orentlicher’s paper was entitled “The Commercial Speech Doctrine in Health Regulation: The Clash Between the Morally Right and the Socially Feasible.”

DAVID ORENTLICHER’s take on the constitutionality of the individual mandate to purchase health care insurance, “Can Congress Make You Buy Broccoli? And Why It Really Doesn’t Matter,” was published in the SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA LAW REVIEW POSTSCRIPT, at 84 S. CAL. L. REV. POSTSCRIPT 9 (2011). On February 18 at the University of Iowa College of Law, Professor Orentlicher presented a paper entitled “Controlling Health Care Costs Through Public Transparent Processes: The Conflict Between the Morally Right and the Socially Feasible” at the Annual Symposium of the Journal of Corporation Law. The article will be published in volume 36, issue 4 of the JOURNAL OF CORPORATION LAW. He also presented the same paper at the Legal Theory Workshop Speaker Series on March 4 at the University of Miami School of Law.

On February 26, Professor Orentlicher presented a paper at the Boston University School of Law for the 2011 Symposium of the American Journal of Law and Medicine. The title of the symposium was “Marketing Health: The Growing Role of Commercial Speech Doctrine in FDA Regulation,” and Professor Orentlicher’s paper was entitled “The Commercial Speech Doctrine in Health Regulation: The Clash Between the Public Interest in a Robust First Amendment and the Public Interest in Effective Prevention of Harm.” The paper will appear in volume 37 of the AMERICAN JOURNAL OF LAW AND MEDICINE.

On April 14, Professor Orentlicher presented a talk in the Faculty Speakers Series at the University of Iowa College of Law. He spoke on “To Kill or Not to Kill: Is that the Question?: Making Sense of the Distinction between the Physician-Assisted Suicide and the Withdrawal of Life-Sustaining.”

Professor ANTONY PAGE presented several works-in-progress, based on his and Professor Robert Katz’s ongoing research project on the legal aspects of social enterprise and social entrepreneurship. Professor Page recently returned from Boulder, Colorado, where he presented, “Is Social Enterprise the New Corporate Social Responsibility?” at the Midwest Law & Economics Annual Conference. He presented the same work at the Law and Society Association’s 2010 annual meeting in Chicago and at the Berle II Conference held at the Seattle University School of Law. Professor Page also presented “Notion Building: Legal Forms for Social Entrepreneurs,” at the University of Kentucky College of Law’s Developing Ideas Conference. The Vermont Law Review in a symposium on Corporate Creativity: The Vermont L3C & Other Developments in Social Entrepreneurship, published two of their articles, “Freezing out Ben & Jerry: Corporate Law and the Sale of a Social Enterprise Icon,” 35 Vt. L. Rev. 211 (2010), and “The Role of Social Enterprise,” 35 Vt. L. Rev. 59 (2010). In addition, unrelated to social entrepreneurship, Professor Page presented “Poll Workers, Election Administration, and the Problem of Implicit Bias,” in Vancouver at the American Psychology-Law Society’s Annual Conference. His article, “Batson’s Blind Spot: Unconscious Stereotyping and the Peremptory Challenge”, 85 B.U. L. Rev. 155 (2005), was cited in a concurring opinion by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court in Commonwealth vs. McCowen, 458 Mass. 461 (2010). From mid-June to mid-July 2010, Professor Page served as the resident professor for the law school’s Central & Eastern European Law Program based near Dubrovnik Croatia.

In January, MICHAEL PITTS testified in front of the Indiana State Senate in support of a bill related to provisional balloting. In March, he appeared (along with alumnus Senator Tim Lanane and 1L student Senator Brandt Hershman) on WFYI’s Indiana Lawmakers show for a roundtable discussion about legislative redistricting. In May, he served as a hooder for the 2011 graduating class.

FRAN QUIGLEY was appointed Clinical Professor and will begin teaching in the new Health and Human Rights Clinic in the Fall of 2011. He also was appointed Senior Advisor to the IU Center for Global Health. Professor Quigley delivered presentations on “Indiana Drones: International Law, Morality, and Robotic Warfare in the Heartland” to several groups throughout Indiana in early 2011, including to the Bloomington Peace Action Coalition, the Midwest Peace and Justice Summit, and Manchester College. He also presented on “Social Justice Advocacy” to the GlobeMed Global Health Summit at Northwestern University and on Medical-Legal Partnerships to the Indiana Coalition of Human Services Providers and Health Foundation of Greater Indianapolis.

The fourth edition of Dean GARY R. ROBERTS co-authored casebook, Sports and the Law, published by West, along with the statutory and document supplement thereto, were published and released in January of this year. He was selected as on-air legal analyst for the NFL Network and also was featured in dozens of media interviews during the past few months related to the labor dispute in professional football. On April 8, Dean Roberts spoke at a conference on Amateur Sports Law at Southwestern Law School in L.A. He addressed the antitrust issues relating to the BCS and college football’s post-season. He also spoke on selected “hot topics” in sports law at the annual conference of executive directors and general counsels of the 50 state members of the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations in Indianapolis on April 15. On May 19, he delivered his 18th annual talk on “Recent Developments in Sport Law” to kick off the Sports Lawyers Association’s annual conference in Washington, D.C.

Professor FLORENCE WAGMAN ROISMAN, the William F. Harvey Professor of Law, has received four honors recently. The students selected her to be a “hooder” at the 2011 commencement ceremony; the Executive Committee of the law school chose her... to receive a Trustees Teaching Award; the Chancellor of the IUPUI campus, Charles Bantz, notified her that she had been selected as a 2011 Chancellor’s Professor; and the National Low Income Housing Coalition honored her with the Cushing Niles Dolbear Lifetime Service Award.

During the Spring semester, Professor Roisman was on Sabbatical, researching issues related to the mortgage foreclosure crisis. She briefly addressed these issues in her remarks accepting the Dolbear Award; her speech, “A Challenge to Bank of America,” is available at http://indylaw.indiana.edu/instructors/roisman/.

Professor Roisman contributed a book chapter, Teaching to Address the Foreclosure Crisis, in Vulnerable Populations and Transformative Law Teaching: A Critical Reader, published by Carolina Academic Press. This grew out of several presentations she made about teaching materials pertinent to foreclosure issues and the preparation of edited cases and other documents. This work was supported by a 2010 Teaching Assistance/Instructional Development Grant from the law school’s Alumni Association. The Norman Amaker Mid-West Public Interest Law Retreat, previously co-sponsored by our law school and the Society of American Law Teachers (SALT), was co-sponsored in February 2011 by Loyola University Chicago School of Law and SALT. Leadership for this program was provided by our alumna, Professor Emily Benfer of Loyola-Chicago. Professor Roisman was a plenary speaker at the retreat. Professor Roisman also spoke at an April 28 symposium jointly sponsored by the law schools of the universities of Maryland and Baltimore, marking 100 years of legal aid in Maryland. She was on a panel discussing “Using Enforceable Human Rights toRepresent Poor People.” She also participated in the Steering Committee of the Right to Housing Litigation Strategy Initiative, helping to plan a conference held in Washington, DC in June.

While on Sabbatical, Professor Roisman supervised two Advanced Course-Related Experiences with students who worked on issues related to foreclosure defense and landlord-tenant court proceedings in Indiana. Professor Roisman continues to serve on the boards of directors of the American Civil Liberties Union of Indiana and the Inclusive Communities Project of Dallas, TX. She helps to raise funds for the National Housing Law Project and for the eponymous Public Interest Summer Scholarships sponsored by the law school’s Equal Justice Works chapter, for which she is faculty advisor. This Summer, five students will have those scholarships. This Summer Scholarship program was started by Professor Emily Benfer of Loyola when she was a student at our law school.

JOEL SCHUMM presented on the topic, “What is Wrong with this Brief?” for a day-long seminar that he was instrumental in planning for the Federal District Court for Southern District of Indiana and Federal Bar Association, December 3, 2010. In February, he made a presentation on the topic, “A Look Back on 2010 & Ahead to 2011: Significant Developments in Indiana Criminal Law and Procedure,” for the Marion County Public Defender Agency in Indianapolis.

Professor Schumm was a co-presenter with Professor Deborah McGregor at the Rocky Mountain Regional Legal Writing Conference at the Boyd School of Law, University of Nevada-Las Vegas, on March 26. Their topic was “Grading Along the Way: Numbers or Letters?” In April, Professor Schumm was a panelist and presenter on “Sentencing Hearing & Sentencing Considerations,” and “The Sentencing Decision & Sentence on Appeal,” at the Indiana Judicial Center, Indianapolis. The sessions were attended by 150 trial judges from throughout the state. And finally, on May 13, Professor Schumm was a panelist for a “Criminal Appeals Brown Bag Lunch Session,” sponsored by ICLEF and the ISBA Appellate Practice Section, and he also was a presenter on “Recent Developments in Indiana Appellate and Criminal Law,” for the Indiana Public Defender Council. Both events were in Indianapolis.

On March 8, at the law school, FRAN WATSON facilitated competition trial team and clinical students’ participation in the IU alumni event, “Damages,” a simulated interdisciplinary learning experience for attorneys, doctors, dentists, and social workers. With Wrongful Conviction Clinic students, Professor Watson also attended the Innocence Network Conference, An International Exploration of Wrongful Conviction in Cincinnati, Ohio, April 7-10. During the conference, Professor Watson moderated a panel on “Habeas Pitfalls and Timelines.”

JAMES P. WHITE, Professor Emeritus, chaired the Butler University Presidential Search Committee, which culminated in the appointment of James M. Danko as Butler’s 21st president. Professor White conducted a site review of University of Paris X Faculty of Law LL.M. Program for American law students and law graduates in March. He served on the Board of Atlanta’s John Marshall Law School and the California Western School of Law. He also serves as a Trustee of the Indianapolis Museum of Art. He continues to serve as a Trustee of Butler University where he chairs the board’s Academic Affairs Committee, and serves on the Executive Committee.

In May, he was re-elected as Secretary of the Butler Board of Trustees and Butler Foundation.

In June 2010, LLOYD T. (TOM) WILSON, JR. was the Resident Professor for the law school’s Chinese Law Summer Program at the Renmin University of China Law School in Beijing, China. Wilson, who directs the summer program, led 33 students from five states and Singapore for a four-week study of China’s emerging market economy. For more information about the Chinese Summer Law program, see http://www.indylaw.indiana.edu/courses/studyabroad.htm. On June 7, 2010, Professor Wilson moderated and spoke at the Sino-US International Forum for Law Students, held at the Renmin University of China Law School. The forum featured an exchange of observations about legal education by US and Chinese law students, with commentary by US, Chinese and British legal educators. The forum was sponsored by the Joint Center for Asian Law Studies, which Wilson directs in partnership with Renmin University of China Law School Professor Ding Xiansheng. For more information about the forum, see http://indylaw.indiana.edu/news/current.cfm?nid=459.

Later that month, Professor Wilson chaired and spoke at the 1st Sino-U.S. Real Estate Law Conference at the Renmin University of China. The conference included two days of presentations by US law professors and one day of presentations by Chinese law
Professors Lopez and Wilson Receive Prestigious External Award Recognition

Professors María Pabón López and Lloyd T. (Tom) Wilson received 2011 Prestigious External Award Recognition (PEAR) at the Chancellor's Academic Honors Convocation on April 29, a campus-wide event to recognize faculty and student achievements on the IUPUI campus. Professor López received the PEAR in honor of her induction into the American Law Institute (ALI). Professor Wilson’s PEAR comes after he was named a Neil MacCormick Fellow at the University of Edinburgh Law School.

From August 30 through September 3, 2010, Professor Wilson conducted the second annual program in American Law for faculty and students from Faculdades Esperito Santenses (Esperito Santo School of Law), which is located in Vitoria, Espirito Santo, Brazil (FAESA). The 2010 Program focused on U.S. Constitutional Law. The lectures addressed the reserved powers clause of the 10th Amendment and the Enumerated Powers in Article I and utilized the pleadings and briefs from the lawsuits filed by the Attorneys General of twenty-two states challenging the national health care law. In addition, Indiana Supreme Court Justice Frank Sullivan, Jr. delivered a lecture on birthright citizenship, and Indiana Court of Appeals Judge Paul Mathais and Public Defender Anna Onaitis Holden, ’05, spoke about emerging due process protections for persons accused of a crime but prevented by mental incompetency from assisting counsel in their defense. For more information about the FAESA program, see http://indylaw.indiana.edu/news/current.cfm?nid=460.

From September 1 through December 1, Professor Wilson was in residence at the University of Edinburgh Law School in Scotland as a Neil MacCormick Fellow. The MacCormick Fellowship is named in honor of Professor Sir Neil MacCormick, Professor Emeritus at Edinburgh Law School and formerly Regius Professor of Public Law and the Law of Nature and Nations. A maximum of five MacCormick fellowships are awarded annually to professors from around the world. Professor Wilson will join professors from Victoria University of Wellington, Queens University, Canada, University of Montreal and University of California, Berkeley.

On October 3 and 4, Professor Wilson was an invited speaker at the Second 21st Century forum of International Law School Deans and Jurists which focused on “China and the World—Legal Systems in Transformation.” Professor Wilson spoke on the relationship between a law school’s mission statement and its curriculum. Speakers from thirty other countries spoke about the challenges facing law schools and innovative responses to those challenges.

On November 18, Professor Wilson delivered the Neil MacCormick Memorial Lecture at the University of Edinburgh Law School, where he presented his research concerning the decommodification of land through community land trusts as a means of providing a source of permanently affordable housing. On November 23, Professor Wilson delivered a lecture to the faculty of the University of Aberdeen School Law School comparing Scottish and US responses to the issue of escalating housing costs.

Professor Wilson’s most recent published article is “Following Transformation’s Thread: Reflections on the Citizen-Lawyer as Transformative Agent,” 43 Ind. L. Rev. 1091 (2010). This article opens a volume of the Indiana Law Review dedicated to presentations made at the 2010 annual meeting of the American Association of Law Schools’ Section on Real Estate Transactions held in New Orleans in January 2010. The volume also contains articles by seven other speakers on a variety of topics relating to the law as transformative agent.

On April 29, at the Chancellor’s Academic Honors Convocation, Professor Wilson received the PEAR Award (Prestigious External Award Recognition) in honor of the Neil MacCormick Fellowship that he received for the fall 2011 semester at the University of Edinburgh Law School in Scotland.

From May 20 through June 18, Professor Wilson served as the Resident Professor at the law school’s 2011 Chinese Law Summer Program at the Renmin University of China Law School in Beijing.

Law School Librarians Promote Online Legal Research Course

IU – Law librarians participated in the 2011 E.C. Moore Symposium on Excellence in Teaching in February, sharing their experience in designing and teaching the law school’s new online Legal Research course. The objective of the 13-week course is to give law students practical experience researching legal issues using a wide variety of electronic resources. Law librarians Miriam Murphy, Debra Denslaw, Catherine Lemmer, and Steven Miller were awarded a grant by the IUPUI Center for Teaching & Learning in Spring 2010 to develop the course. Future librarian presentations include: a meeting of the Indianapolis Law Librarians’ Association; the Academic Libraries of Indiana annual meeting, Indiana University Librarians’ Day, and the annual meeting of the Ohio Regional Association of Law Libraries in Cincinnati.
