Office of Professional Development Nurtures Careers and Inspires Alumni Support

CBS News’ 48 Hours Program Features Work of Professor Fran Watson and Students
Message from the Dean

This issue of our alumni magazine, The McKinney Lawyer, includes our annual Dean’s Report, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your generosity to our law school. Your philanthropy is critical to our ability to carry out the school’s educational mission.

In this issue, you will read about the impact of your support, including how alumni giving allows our Office of Professional Development to provide important programming that assists our students as they navigate the job search process. You also will see how our centers and programs are confronting important issues of the day, and how students benefit from scholarships that make a legal education more affordable.

Reading through the magazine reinforces my longstanding belief that a contribution to our school is not only an investment in our institution, but in society as a whole. In this issue, we cover alumni who are serving in elected offices—locally, statewide, and nationally. We highlight the work of alumni who have dedicated their careers to public interest causes, and we honor our students, who participate at the highest levels in our Pro Bono Program. Last year, the graduating class of 2016 collectively donated nearly 20,000 pro bono hours throughout their law school careers. Think about that—and about how many underserved individuals in the community were helped by IU McKinney law students.

Our societal impact doesn’t stop there. Through our newest clinical program, the Child Advocacy Law Clinic, students are sworn in as guardians ad litem, and provide representation for children in the Marion County child welfare system. You will also see an article about the efforts of our Black Law Students Association, which organized programs to benefit formerly-incarcerated individuals, including a job and resource fair that garnered more than 150 participants.

In addition, this issue of the magazine includes a follow-up story about our clinic professor, Fran Watson, and her students, who worked tirelessly toward the exoneration of their wrongfully convicted clients through the Innocence Project. Just last month, their story and that of their clients was shown across the country on the CBS News program, 48 Hours.

Our students and faculty are in the community, making a difference, every day.

Your contributions to our school are critical in making that happen—and for that, I thank you.

Colom, ’07, Recognized by ABA, Indianapolis Foundation

In August, Kiamesha-Sylvia G. Colom, ’07, received the 2016 American Bar Association’s On the Rise—Top 40 Young Lawyers Award. She is a partner with Benesh in the real estate and environmental practice group in the Indianapolis office.

The Annual On the Rise—Top 40 Young Lawyers provides national recognition for ABA young lawyer members who exemplify a broad range of high achievement, innovation, vision, leadership, and legal and community service. In this inaugural year of the award, the ABA received thousands of nominations for truly exceptional young lawyers.

Additionally, in September, she was chosen as one of the inaugural Indianapolis Foundation Fellows. The pilot program places 10 individuals on 10 local not-for-profit boards for three-year terms—and gives the new board members the money they need to make the necessary contributions to serve on the boards. The goal of the program is to create pathways for diverse leaders to infuse local boards with innovation, energy, and creativity by removing financial and other barriers.

Linda C. Ford, ’95, Joins APTA as Chief Counsel

The American Public Transportation Association (APTA) has named Linda C. Ford as Chief Counsel, effective January 9, 2017.

“This is an exciting opportunity to join APTA,” said Ford. “I am looking forward to continuing my work with the public transit industry in this new capacity.”

Prior to joining the USDOT, Ford held legal and law judge positions in the State of Indiana. She has a Bachelor of General Science degree from Purdue University. Ford resides in Washington, D.C.

IU McKinney Office of Student Affairs Wins Second Statewide Award for Law School Wellness

The Office of Student Affairs (OSA) at IU McKinney Law was honored for the second consecutive year with the Indiana State Bar Association’s Erik Chickedantz Wellness Award for the law school’s wellness efforts on behalf of students.

The school’s recently-formed Wellness Committee, made up of faculty, staff, and students, promotes a culture of wellness within the law school community. The first Wednesday of each month is designated as “Wellness Wednesday,” and the OSA publishes an e-newsletter providing information regarding various wellness initiatives offered on campus and in the community. OSA also hosts events on those days, including self-defense classes and yoga with the McKinney Yoga Club.

This year, the law school participated in ABA National Mental Health Day, by engaging in activities that shed light on the mental health issues law students face. The school also joined over 70 other schools in partnering with the Dave Nee Foundation to offer free and anonymous mental health screenings. In addition, the Wellness Committee, Equal Justice Works, and the Judges and Lawyers Assistance Program hosted an event that discussed JLAP resources and how to deal with the stress that comes along with the practice of law.

Magnus-Stinson, ‘83, Named Chief Judge

On Wednesday, November 23, 2016, the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana came under the leadership of a new chief judge, the Honorable Jane E. Magnus-Stinson, ‘83. She assumed this position upon the expiration of Judge Richard L. Young’s term as chief judge.

Chief Judge Magnus-Stinson received her commission as district judge for the Southern District of Indiana on June 9, 2010, filling a vacancy created by Judge Larry J. McKinney’s assumption of senior status on July 4, 2009. Before becoming a district judge, Chief Judge Magnus-Stinson served the Southern District of Indiana as a magistrate judge from 2007 until her elevation. Prior to that, from 1995-2007, she was a judge on the Marion County Superior Court. Chief Judge Magnus-Stinson is a graduate of Butler University and the Indiana University McKinney School of Law.

Chief Judge Magnus-Stinson currently serves on the Defender Services Committee of the Judicial Conference of the United States, the Seventh Circuit Criminal Pattern Jury Instructions Committee, the Seventh Circuit Advisory Committee on Rules, and the Seventh Circuit Committee on Supervised Release. She has served as Chair of the Facility/Court Security Committee for the Southern District of Indiana since 2010.
On January 20, Indiana’s 50th governor, Mike Pence, ‘86, took the oath of office to become the nation’s 48th vice president. He was sworn in by United States Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas during a Capitol Hill ceremony that commenced at 11:53 a.m.

With his wife, Karen Pence, holding both their family Bible, as well as the Bible that had belonged to former President Ronald Reagan, he recited the oath of office, saying, “I, Michael Richard Pence, do solemnly swear, that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will, well and faithfully, discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter; so help me God.”

Vice President Pence grew up in Columbus, Indiana, graduating from Columbus North High School in 1977. He earned his bachelor’s degree in history in 1981, from Hanover College, and his J.D. from IU McKinney Law in 1986.

From 1981-83, he worked as an admissions counselor at Hanover. Following graduation from law school, he entered private practice. From 1991-93, he served as president of the Indiana Policy Review Foundation. He served as host of a talk radio program, The Mike Pence Show, which was syndicated by Network Indiana and carried on 18 stations throughout Indiana. From 1995-99 he also hosted a weekend political talk show in Indianapolis.

He was elected to the United States Congress, representing Indiana’s second and sixth districts, until his inauguration as governor of Indiana in 2013.

While a member of the U.S. House, Pence served on the Agriculture, Judiciary, International Relations and Foreign Affairs Committees. In January 2009, Pence... was elected as the Republican Conference Chairman, the third-highest-ranking Republican leadership position. He served as Governor of Indiana from 2013-2017, and was elected to the office of U.S. Vice President in November.

Hundreds of thousands of Americans were present to witness the inauguration ceremony in Washington, D.C., including former Vice President Dan Quayle, ’74. Alumnus Bob Grand, ’82, was also present, having served on the Presidential Inaugural Committee for the 58th presidential inauguration. The committee was responsible for the planning and coordination of all official events and activities surrounding the inauguration. Grand was one of the finance vice chairs on the committee.

Three groups from the state of Indiana performed in the Inaugural Parade. The first group to appear was the Indianapolis Metropolitan Police Department (IMPD) Drill Team, with their police motorcycles spelling out “Indianapolis” in red letters. The Culver Academies Black Horse Troop and Equestriennes participated along the route, as did the Columbus North High School marching band, from Vice President Pence’s alma mater.

On the evening prior to the inauguration, Pence was honored at the Indiana Inaugural Ball, which took place in Washington, D.C. at the Grand Hyatt Washington.
A large number of alumni of the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law were elected or re-elected to public office during the general election on November 8, 2016. Most notably among them is Governor Mike Pence, ’86, who was elected to the office of Vice President of the United States.

Also at the federal level, Congressman Todd Young, ’06, was elected to the United States Senate. He previously represented Indiana’s 9th District in Congress. Congresswoman Susan Brooks, ’85, was re-elected; she represents District 5. Congressman Todd Rokita, ’95, also was re-elected, representing District 4.

“We are proud of our alumni in public service across the state and nation who serve in a wide range of positions of responsibility and leadership,” said IU McKinney Dean Andy Klein.

Re-elected to state offices were Representative Brian Bosma, ’84, who represents District 88 in the Indiana House, where he also serves as Speaker. Representative Mike Speedy, ’95, was re-elected to the Indiana House, where he represents District 90. Representative Ryan Dvorak, ’08, was re-elected to represent District 8, and Representative Thomas Washburne, ’90, was re-elected to represent District 64.

Senator Brandt Hershman, ’16, who represents District 7, serves as majority floor leader. Also re-elected was Senator Susan Glick, ’78, who represents District 13; and Senator Michael Young, ’09, who represents District 35.

Two IU McKinney alumni on the Indiana Court of Appeals faced retention votes this year. Judge Patricia Riley, ’74, and Judge James Kirsch, ’74, were both retained to the bench.
Office of Professional Development Nurtures Careers and Inspires Alumni Support

By Alicia Dean Carlson

As a law student in the Class of 2017, Jasmine Ivy-Dede sought help at the IU McKinney Office of Professional Development (OPD) for the usual things—a review of her resume, networking opportunities and job leads.

But as Ivy-Dede finishes her final year of law school with plans to join the Indianapolis law firm of Bose McKinney & Evans, she praises Assistant Dean Chasity Q. Thompson, ’02, and office staff for so much more, including their support and encouragement.

“The people in the Office of Professional Development have given me everything I need to be successful,” she says.

Dean Thompson is in her tenth year leading the office, working alongside Associate Director Sean Southern and the OPD staff to help students build connections and advance their careers.

The OPD offers every McKinney Law student a career coach available to discuss personal career strategy, or the opportunity to take part in programs covering such topics as interviewing, job-search techniques, and alternative careers. Within the OPD, the Pro Bono Program provides students with valuable experience while helping the community, with graduating classes donating more than 20,000 hours of service over the past few years, Thompson said.

Prospective employers use the OPD’s on-campus interview program and online job search system to find the right McKinney students and graduates for their organizations. Alumni play a key role, too, through collaborative programs like Operation L.A.W.S. (Law Alumni Working with Students), the Mock Interview Program, an on-site Job Fair, 1L Career Conferences, and monthly coffee chats. Alumni also assist the office through participation in the Pathways to the Profession Program, which includes networking events where alumni share information with students about different areas of practice along with details about day-to-day experiences in their chosen fields.

“Our graduates represent a wide array of career paths, and we appreciate that many alumni are willing to give back to the school through their time and willingness to give advice to students, and to hire them,” Thompson said. “With strong alumni support, IU McKinney provides resources to help students discover and develop themselves and their skills.”

The Office of Professional Development has impressed James Barkley, ’77, former general counsel and secretary for the Indianapolis-based Simon Property Group, where he now serves as Of Counsel. He started his 40-year career with the commercial real estate giant after spotting an opening for a law clerk position on an index card on a bulletin board at the law school.

Barkley, a member of the law school’s Board of Visitors, and his wife, Cindy, recently made a significant gift commitment to the law school to advance the goals of the Office of Professional Development, through the university’s For All Campaign.

“Historically, a great deal of attention was paid to ensuring that IU McKinney attracted and retained qualified candidates, but under Chasity’s leadership, the Office of Professional Development has become an integral part of a McKinney student’s law school experience to better prepare them for post graduate careers,” Barkley said. “We are delighted to assist Chasity and her team as they continue to expand and improve upon the OPD offerings and help put IU McKinney graduates on a path to professional success.”

“We are extremely grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Barkley,” Thompson said. “Because of their generosity, we are able to offer several new initiatives to further help students, including the launch of the Professional Development Institute, which will include personal assessments, resiliency training, public speaking and development, mentoring and honing soft skills that help executives advance in their careers. IU McKinney is proud to have a long history of successfully educating students to become leaders in law and other fields,” Thompson added. “Our team will continue to work hard to ensure that the next generation of McKinney graduates will continue this legacy.”
Thanks to philanthropic support from generous alumni, we are able to assist the next generation of McKinney lawyers. The current For All Campaign includes opportunities for generous alumni to support scholarships, experiential learning and other educational programs, as well as faculty endowments. For information about how you can participate in the For All Campaign, contact Assistant Dean for Development, Nan Edgerton, at 317-274-8147, or nanedge@iu.edu.
The Campaign for IU McKinney Law

An investment in the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law is not just an investment in an educational institution, but in the community—and in society as a whole. For more than a century, the IU McKinney School of Law has provided an excellent learning experience for those who have gone on to become outstanding attorneys, jurists, business leaders, government officials, and community visionaries.

IU McKinney Law’s Four Funding Priorities for the For All Campaign

The law school has identified the following four goals for the For All Campaign:

Foster Student Success
Expand Experiential and Skills Learning
Enhance Faculty Excellence
Create a Better State, Nation and World

You can help IU McKinney Law to reach these goals today. Remember—every gift counts—and no gift is too small—or too large!
Foster Student Success

One of the best ways to help a student to be successful is by providing scholarship assistance. Scholarships enable us to attract talented, motivated individuals and to lessen the financial burdens they face when pursuing a law degree. Many students would not be able to realize their dreams of legal careers without this type of financial assistance. Scholarship support is critical for a large percentage of students—and your investment in their futures can make all the difference.

There are several additional ways that the law school is working to foster student success. The Office of Student Affairs offers several academic success programs including a series of first-year skills workshops, one-on-one academic success advising, exam preparation advising, and peer-to-peer tutoring offered through the longstanding Dean’s Tutorial Society.

Also, in 2013, the law school faculty established the IU McKinney “College of Advisors” to provide extra assistance for incoming first-year students on issues of academic performance, course choice and timing, learning outcomes, career opportunities and professionalism.

Funding for these support programs helps all IU McKinney Law students to reach their potential and to embark on productive careers, making important contributions to society.

Expand Experiential and Skills Learning

Experiential learning is integrated into every McKinney student’s law school education. With more than 350 experiential learning opportunities such as externships in leading businesses, organizations and government, students have unparalleled opportunities to gain necessary hands-on experience.

IU McKinney Law also offers an extensive legal skills training program, starting with the school’s nationally-recognized Legal Communication and Analysis program. Courses in drafting, interviewing and counseling, mediation and trial and appellate advocacy are complemented by other curricular offerings that integrate advocacy and transactional practice skills into doctrinal courses. Simulation and skills courses, in addition to externships, provide students with the real-world experience that is so important for new lawyers.

At IU McKinney, there are ten live-client clinics, each with a different focus and all operating under the supervision of clinical faculty:

- Appellate Clinic
- Child Advocacy Law Clinic
- Civil Practice Clinic
- Civil Practice Clinic: Interdisciplinary
- Law and Social Work Clinic
- Criminal Defense Clinic
- Conservation Law Clinic
- Disability Clinic
- Health and Human Rights Clinic
- Immigration Clinic
- Wrongful Conviction Clinic

With your assistance, we can strengthen our opportunities for experiential learning and skills education, enabling more students to develop the expertise they need to succeed in their careers.

Enhance Faculty Excellence

Our professors’ dual roles as teacher and scholar are at the heart of our success as a law school. The work they do to confront challenges facing society, directly informs their classroom teaching. Our continued excellence in education depends upon our ability to attract, recruit, and retain the best scholars and educators—and to offer them the support they need to pursue research in their specialty areas.

Endowed chairs, professorships, and funds for faculty development provide the essential financial boost that is needed to foster the school’s excellence in teaching and academic research, providing the foundation that allows our faculty to innovate, inspire and mentor our students as they strive to become the next generation of outstanding attorneys.

Create a Better State, Nation and World

Law is the foundation of our society. At the IU McKinney School of Law, our academic community works to confront complex challenges and overcome the problems of today’s world. The school’s academic centers and programs facilitate invaluable research and contribute to society at large through collaborations with leaders in law, business and government. IU McKinney Law alumni serve in leadership positions throughout the state and nation, providing approximately half the lawyers and judges in the State of Indiana, as well as leaders across the country in a variety of positions.

With your help, we can ensure that faculty and students working in our centers and programs are empowered to pursue solutions to the world’s challenges in vital areas for the benefit of all.

Gift to IU McKinney An Expression of Gratitude for Legal Education

by Rebecca Trimpe

Reed Oslan, ’87, has a legal career that many attorneys would envy. After starting out in Indianapolis, Oslan was recruited by the Chicago, Illinois-based firm, Kirkland & Ellis. He has thrived in the firm’s litigation group, where he works on large commercial disputes such as breach of contract and fraud claims, claims relating to restructurings, international arbitrations, and other commercial disputes.

The legal education he received at IU McKinney is the reason for his success, Oslan said, and he’s eager to give back and support the institution that helped set him on his career path. The For All Bicentennial Campaign, focused on philanthropy to foster student success, experiential learning, and faculty excellence, provided the perfect opportunity for Oslan to consider how to support IU McKinney.

“It is clear to me that the law school does not receive the accolades it deserves and, thus, it does not receive the funding it deserves,” Oslan said. “I have been fortunate to have an amazing career, and I want to give back to help drive the law school’s many outstanding programs.”

Oslan has made a planned gift commitment of retirement plan assets to IU McKinney in the amount of $2.5 million. “My gift to the school expresses my gratitude for the outstanding legal education I received there,” he said. “That education was the foundation that allowed me to enjoy a fantastically challenging and interesting career.”

After learning about the tax benefits of making a gift to the school, it seemed a good fit. In some instances, taxes can consume as much as 90 percent of the funds in retirement accounts from an estate. “By creating a gift to the law school from my retirement accounts, we can avoid the tax and benefit the law school greatly,” Oslan said. The gift from his estate has the full support of his wife and children, he said.

This isn’t Oslan’s first gift to IU McKinney; he received the IUPUI Spirit of Philanthropy award in 2013 in recognition of his generosity. The award honors those who have had a profound impact on the school’s growth and development through their gifts and volunteer service. Oslan serves on the IU McKinney Board of Visitors. While in law school, he was Associate Editor of the Indiana Law Review, and graduated magna cum laude.

Law school initially wasn’t on the top of the list of things to tackle after completing his undergraduate studies, Oslan said. While he had a father, an uncle, and some cousins who had earned law degrees, “it was on a bit of a whim that I decided to go to law school,” he said. Considering his family connections to the profession, “it was probably a natural place for me to land,” he said.

What Oslan learned at IU McKinney prepared him not only to compete at the highest levels of the profession, but to achieve success as well.

“While in law school, it never occurred to me that my legal education would permit me to work successfully at one of the largest firms in the world,” Oslan said. “Looking back now, I realize my education was excellent and prepared me to work alongside partners from the top-ranked law schools in the country. Without the school, I would not have had such a fabulous career. The law school deserves much credit. It changed my life—very much for the better.”

“I have been fortunate to have an amazing career, and I want to give back to help drive the law school’s many outstanding programs.”
On Saturday, February 4, the CBS News program, 48 Hours, aired an episode entitled, “Guilty Until Proven Innocent,” that focused on the convictions of Darryl Pinkins and Roosevelt Glenn in a gang rape case in Hammond, Indiana, in the early 1990s (Pinkins was convicted in 1991, Glenn in 1993). The episode also illustrated the efforts of IU McKinney Law Professor Fran Watson, ’80, and her students as they worked toward the exoneration of both men. Professor Watson, along with students in the IU McKinney Wrongful Conviction Clinic, had been involved in the representation of Pinkins and Glenn since receiving the case in 1999 on a referral from the Innocence Project, a non-profit legal organization committed to exonerating wrongly convicted people through the use of DNA testing.

The 48 Hours program traced the story of Pinkins and Glenn from the night of the crime, through the convictions, and the exonerations, which were based on new DNA evidence. In 2015, after years of work and appeals brought by Professor Watson and her students, the Indiana Court of Appeals granted permission to Pinkins to seek a new trial, due to a recent analysis using TrueAllele® Case-work technology, a new computerized DNA interpretation system.

The TrueAllele® test found that none of the DNA samples from the victim’s clothing in the Hammond case matched either Pinkins’ or Glenn’s DNA. In April 2016, charges against Pinkins were dropped. (Roosevelt Glenn had been released in 2009, and his conviction vacated on January 30, 2017.)

On the evening that the program aired, Professor Watson, her current and former students, along with Darryl Pinkins, Roosevelt Glenn...
Glenn and their families and friends, gathered at the law school to watch a live feed of the program. They were joined by 48 Hours producer Judy Rybak, and Professor Greg Hampikian of the Idaho Innocence Project, a DNA expert and a Professor at Boise State University, who was featured in the program. Hampikian worked on both the Pinkins and Glenn cases with Professor Watson and her students.

Prior to the screening of the program, both Roosevelt Glenn and Darryl Pinkins addressed the crowd, expressing their gratitude to Professor Watson and the students. Glenn referred to them as his “dream team.”

Rybak, the show’s producer, said that it had been an honor to work with Glenn and Pinkins, as well as Professor Watson and her students.

Over the years, the 48 Hours program has won numerous awards, including Peabodys, Emmys, and Edward R. Murrow Awards for in-depth reporting.
The law school’s 8th Annual Public Interest Recognition Dinner took place on Saturday, April 16 and featured Kenneth J. Falk, Legal Director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Indiana as the keynote speaker. Falk also serves as an adjunct professor at IU McKinney Law.

The dinner took place in the law school atrium, where three individuals were honored for their work in public interest law: Stephen E. Culley, ’77, the Honorable Maria D. Granger, ’94, and Aida J. Ramirez, ’12.

Stephen E. Culley, ’77, is a native of Evansville. He began working as a volunteer for what was then known as the Legal Services Organization. He received a Reginald Heber Smith Fellowship and worked for the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund in Welch, West Virginia for one year. He returned to Evansville when Indiana Legal Services opened its office in that city. Much of his work focuses on eviction and foreclosure defense issues.

Judge Maria Granger, ’94, presides in the Floyd County Superior Court. Judge Granger is the supervising judge in the county’s Veterans Court of Southern Indiana. This court was created to address the needs of veterans, many of whom have become involved in the court after coping with multiple deployments through their military service. The court addresses issues of mental health, alcohol, and substance abuse.

Aida Ramirez, ’12, is director of the Columbus Human Rights Commission. While in law school, she spent a significant amount of time volunteering with a project aimed at improving landlord-tenant proceedings in small claims courts in Indiana. In her role at the Human Rights Commission, she helps enforce the city’s ordinances that prohibit discrimination.

Proceeds from the dinner support the law school’s Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP) Endowment, which helps our graduates working in public interest to repay their student loans.
The 9th Annual Public Interest Recognition Dinner will take place at the law school on Saturday, March 25, 2017, and will feature Professor Florence Wagman Roisman as the keynote speaker. Honorees will include the Honorable Carr Darden, ’70, Indiana Court of Appeals (retired); Cindy Booth, ’91, Executive Director of Child Advocates; and Kevin Munoz, ’08, Munoz Legal.
The Pro Bono and Clinical Programs 2016 awards and recognition reception was held on April 19 in the atrium at Inlow Hall. Professor Novella Nedeff, '83, introduced the afternoon’s keynote speaker, Judge Patricia Riley, ’74, of the Indiana Court of Appeals. Judge Riley commended the students who were being honored at the reception for their commitment to pro bono service while successfully navigating the rigors of law school.

The class of 2016 contributed a total of 19,386 hours of pro bono service during their time at IU McKinney. Students are recognized according to the number of pro bono hours they have completed during law school. Those completing 200+ hours receive the Norman Lefstein Award of Excellence—gold level recognition. Fifty students in the class of 2016 received this designation. Those completing 100-199 hours receive the Mary H. Mitchell Outstanding Service Award—silver level recognition, and those completing 50-99 hours of pro bono service receive bronze level recognition.

Alex Van Gorp received the John Paul Berlon Award for the 1,231 hours of pro bono service he contributed during his law school career with the Indiana Civil Rights Commission and the Indianapolis Bar Association. The award is named for IU McKinney alumnus, John Paul Berlon, ’00, in recognition of his outstanding contributions to pro bono service while in school.

Katherine Voskoboynik was a co-recipient of the Outstanding Clinical Student award. She received the honor for her work in the Health and Human Rights Clinic, crafting what Professor Quigley called a “groundbreaking” report on access to dialysis treatment for undocumented immigrants in Indiana.

Christi Rever also was a co-recipient of the Outstanding Clinical Student award. She received the award for her work in the Disability Clinic with Professor Joanne Orr, who directs that clinic. A few days prior to a hearing in a case, the judge indicated that only one clinic student would be permitted to participate. Professor Orr commended Rever for taking on the last-minute added work and helping to win a favorable outcome for the client.

A panel of experts at the top of their game in the area of sports and law visited IU McKinney for a program on “Business, Law and Intercollegiate Athletics.” The event took place on April 14 in the Wynne Courtroom.

Oliver Luck, NCAA Executive Vice President of Regulatory Affairs, was the first to present during the program. He discussed the tension in the question of whether student-athletes are employees of the institutions for which they play. Specifically, Luck talked about the O’Bannon v. NCAA antitrust class action, and the movement among Northwestern University football players to unionize. Luck was quarterback for the Houston Oilers for five seasons, and attended law school at the University of Texas School of Law while he was playing.

Fred Glass, ’84, IU Vice President and Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, was next to speak. Glass talked about leading the athletics department during times of change, as well as the bill of rights for student athletes; IU was the first institution to put one in place.

Julie Roe Lach, ’04, Deputy Commissioner of the Horizon League, was the next to speak. She handles the day-to-day operations within the league while supervising regular season and championship competition, student-athlete well-being, and corporate sponsorships, among other responsibilities. Lach is a former First Team All-American and GTE Academic All-American women’s basketball player at Millikin University.

Gene Marsh, Of Counsel in the Birmingham, Alabama, office of the law firm Jackson Lewis, was the final panelist to speak during the program. Marsh was a member of the NCAA Division I Committee on Infractions from 1999 to 2008, and served as chair of that committee from 2004 to 2006. Professor emeritus at the University of Alabama School of Law, he served as the Faculty Athletics Representative to the Southeastern Conference and the NCAA from 1996 through 2003.

This event was made possible through the Alan and Linda Cohen Family Foundation Sports and Entertainment Law Fund, established in 2011.

Cohen Family Foundation Endowment Supports Sports and Entertainment Law Programming

Sports are a vital part of what makes Indianapolis thrive. Alan Cohen, '73, former chief executive officer for The Finish Line, established the endowment to support sports and entertainment law programming at IU McKinney to help the law school leverage its connections in these areas. Funded by the Alan and Linda Cohen Family Foundation, the generous grant also was made on behalf of Cohen's daughter, Lauren Cohen Edmundson, '05.

Alan Cohen served as a member of the law school's Board of Visitors for many years, and is a tremendous supporter of IU McKinney. After practicing law for a few years, he co-founded The Finish Line in 1982, helped it grow to become the second largest athletic retailer by 2002, and saw the company go public in 2003. He retired in 2010, and the Cohens and their children administer the family foundation.

Judge Lynch was appointed U.S. Magistrate Judge on October 24, 2008. Prior to the appointment, she was Of Counsel at the law firm then known as Sommer Barnard, (now Taft Stettinius & Hollister), until her appointment. Her practice included litigation of contract disputes, business dissolutions, antitrust matters, securities fraud cases, professional malpractice actions, and non-competition and trade secret matters. Before joining the firm, Judge Lynch served as a law clerk to the Honorable Sarah Evans Barker from 1986 to 1988.

At the luncheon, tributes to Judge Lynch were provided by Judge Barker, Edward W. Harris, III, from Taft Stettinius & Hollister, and Judge Lynch’s daughter, Elaine McVicker Lynch.

While a student at IU McKinney, Judge Lynch served as editor-in-chief of the Indiana Law Review. She is an active member of the Local Rules Advisory Committee for the Southern District of Indiana and has served as a volunteer for the Heartland Pro Bono Council. Judge Lynch is a member of the Indiana State Bar Association, the Indianapolis Bar Association, the Seventh Circuit Bar Association, and is a Master Member of the Indianapolis American Inn of Court.

IU McKinney partnered with the Kurt Vonnegut Memorial Library to present the program “Talking About Banned Books: Negotiating Values and Conflicts” on September 27. The lively discussion took place in the Wynne Courtroom at Inlow Hall.

Panelists presented a mock mediation session related to books used in schools, with various points of view explored throughout the exercise. Those who took part in the talk included Kristin Beeson, a teacher at Carmel High School; Professor Stephen L. Fox of the IUPUI Department of English; Professor Robert Katz of IU McKinney; Professor Joseph McKinney of Ball State University; Jan Mensz of the ACLU of Indiana; Dean Andrew R. Klein, Professor Joseph McKinney of Ball State University, Daniel Griffith, ’90, IUPUI Office for Intergroup Dialogue and Civil Community and Max Goller, director of education at the Kurt Vonnegut Memorial Library.

The library’s partnership with IU McKinney was a natural fit, said Julia Whitehead, executive director of the Kurt Vonnegut Memorial Library.

“Vonnegut really loved IUPUI,” Whitehead said. “He thought an urban school in Indianapolis was really important. He valued the great reputation IUPUI has academically.”

Partnering with IU McKinney also made sense given how many Vonnegut fans also are attorneys, Whitehead said. Many of the people she reached out to when starting the library were attorneys. “Vonnegut cared about words, and obviously, attorneys care about words, too,” she said.

Daniel Griffith, ’90, director of the Office for Intergroup Dialogue and Civil Community at IUPUI, and also an adjunct professor at the law school, who serves on the Vonnegut Library Board of Directors, worked to organize the September 27 event. An expert in mediation, Griffith has mediated disputes involving parents who object to books their children are assigned to read in school.

“How do we have a good conversation about these issues,” he asked. “We don’t always resolve them, but we strive to create a better understanding.”
Former Olympic Athlete, Legal Scholar, Presents
Fifth Annual Birch Bayh Lecture
at IU McKinney
Nancy Hogshead-Makar, CEO of Champion Women, a former Olympic athlete, and a former professor at the Florida Coastal School of Law, presented the fifth annual Birch Bayh Lecture on October 4.

In remarks titled, “Title IX’s Heavy Lift for Coaches: Why Don’t the Most Successful Women’s Coaches Have Job Security?” Hogshead-Makar spoke about the impact of Title IX from the perspective of someone who has competed as an athlete at the highest levels of sport, and someone who has analyzed its significance as a legal scholar. Senator Bayh wrote the landmark legislation that prohibits discrimination based on gender.

Hogshead-Makar is a life-long advocate for access and equality in athletics. She is chief executive officer of Champion Women, a non-profit organization that advocates for equality and accountability in sport. Focus areas include equal play, such as traditional Title IX compliance in the athletic department, sexual harassment, abuse and assault in sport, as well as employment, pregnancy issues, and LGBT discrimination.

Hogshead-Makar capped eight years as a world-class swimmer at the 1984 Olympics, where she won three gold medals and one silver medal. She has won the prestigious Kiphuth Award, given to the best all-around swimmer nationally, and has been inducted into 11 halls of fame, including the International Swimming Hall of Fame and the International Women’s Sports Hall of Fame. She is an internationally-recognized legal expert on sports issues, and is the co-author of the book, Equal Play, Title IX and Social Change. She has testified before Congress several times on the topic of gender equity in athletics, written many scholarly and lay articles, and is a frequent guest on national news programs.

Hogshead-Makar practiced law at the firm Holland & Knight, and she enjoyed a 30-year history with the Women’s Sports Foundation before starting Champion Women. She received her juris doctorate from Georgetown University Law Center, and is an honors graduate of Duke University.

The Birch Bayh Lecture is an annual event at the school, established in honor of former U.S. Senator Birch Bayh. The lecture series, made possible through the generous contributions of the Simon Property Group where Senator Bayh served on the board for 17 years, and friends of Birch Bayh, focuses on issues of importance to Senator Bayh throughout his long and distinguished career in government. ❖
Program on Law and State Government Symposium Focuses on Flint Water Crisis and State Government Impact

The Program on Law and State Government’s 2016 Fellowship Symposium took place at Inlow Hall on September 30 and was entitled, “Crisis: Lessons from Flint on the Capacities and Limits of State Governments.” The Symposium focused on the Flint drinking water crisis, as part of a larger conversation about state governments’ relationships with the nation’s poorest cities. Dean Andrew Klein provided a welcome to guests at the start of the symposium and was followed by Professor Cynthia Baker, clinical professor of law and the director of the Program on Law and State Government, who presented an overview of the process leading to the final program, entitled, “Two Fellows, One Year, a Million Ideas.”

PLSG Fellow Ryan Heeb, an IU McKinney 3L, approached the issue through the lens of the federal government. He shared his remarks, entitled, “The Limits of the Federal Government: Rethinking the Reliance of States on the Federal Government in Times of Crisis.” Heeb explored possible changes that would increase state governments’ ability to respond to crises independently of the federal government.

PLSG Fellow April Keaton, a 3L evening student at IU McKinney, concentrated her studies on the relationships between Michigan state government, Flint city government, and the private service providers in addressing the city’s budget issues in responding to the water crisis. Keaton’s fellowship address was, “The Evolution of Cities as Economic Engines and Service Providers.”

Following both fellowship presentations, attendees viewed a documentary excerpt of, Here’s to Flint—with a special video introduction by Curt Guyette, an investigative reporter who was working with the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) of Michigan through its Michigan Democracy Watch Project, and helped to uncover the high lead levels in the community water system.

The morning panel discussion focused on the topic, “The Making of the Flint Water Crisis: What Happened and Why?” April Keaton served as the moderator and panelists included Hannah Apps, Professor of Economics, at Kalamazoo College, and Vice Mayor of Kalamazoo, Michigan; Michelle Wilde Anderson, Professor of Law, Robert E. Paradise Faculty Fellow for Excellence in Teaching and Research at Stanford Law School, and David Konisky, Associate Professor of Public and Environmental Affairs at IU Bloomington.
The afternoon panel discussion was entitled, “Lessons from Flint: Learning from the Crisis,” and was moderated by Ryan Heeb. Panelists included Courtney Arango, communications director for the Indiana Department of Environmental Management (IDEM); Mary Hollingsworth, Drinking Water Branch Chief, Office of Water Quality at IDEM; Kristen Barnes, Associate Professor of Law at the University of Akron School of Law, and Carlton Waterhouse, Professor of Law and Director of the Environmental, Energy and Natural Resources Law Program at IU McKinney.

The afternoon panel was followed by a keynote address, “Rethinking Responsibilities: Local Government and the Built Environment,” delivered by Professor Michelle Wilde Anderson from Stanford Law School.

The program concluded with remarks by Professor Cynthia Baker entitled, “How Relevant are State Governments in Times of Crisis?”

The 2016 PLSG Fellows, Ryan Heeb and April Keaton, were guests on the WFYI Public Radio program No Limits on September 15. Along with Professor Cynthia Baker, they discussed the issues related to the symposium program. In the photo from left are Keaton, Heeb, No Limits host John Krull, and Professor Cynthia Baker. Professor Baker is the director of the Program on Law and State Government at IU McKinney.

Lecture Explores the “Truthiness” of Trademarks

The final event in the Center for Intellectual Property Law and Innovation’s Distinguished Lecture Series for the Spring 2016 semester examined the topic, “The Truthiness of Trademarks.” The event took place on April 12 in the Wynne Courtroom and featured Professor Margaret Chon, the Donald and Lynda Horowitz Professor for the Pursuit of Justice at Seattle University School of Law.

In the lecture Professor Chon addressed the turn trademark law took toward “truthiness,” during the twentieth century, noting that consumers have been fed a steady diet of advertising, branding and marketing designed to evoke subjective and often aspirational lifestyles rather than objective product qualities. The term, “truthiness,” was coined by comedian Stephen Colbert to describe something that is true because it feels true.

“What is even truer than this truthiness,” Professor Chon says, “is that trademark law has not evolved to address the kinds of common misrepresentations that occur in this environment of truthiness (not to mention cross-border holding companies and global supply chains). Moreover, trademark law continues to view consumers as mere passive recipients of trademarks, rather than as increasingly active and participatory global prosumers through social media and social justice campaigns.”

Her lecture titled “RATS, TRAPS, and Trade Secrets,” took place on September 13 in the Wynne Courtroom at IU McKinney.

“Professor Rowe is the leading authority in Trade Secret law, a very important area of Intellectual Property law,” said Professor Xuan-Thao Nguyen, director of IU McKinney’s IP Center. “She was a partner at Hale & Dorr (now WilmerHale) before she entered academia. It is very rare to have a partner at a prestigious national firm become a full-time academic. I believe that her profound scholarship is shaped by her rich legal experience. She has published extensively in both books and law reviews on the latest issues concerning Trade Secrets. Her scholarly work is very relevant to academics, practitioners and policy makers.” Professor Rowe is the Director of the Program in Intellectual Property Law at the University of Florida Levin College of Law, where she is the Feldman Gale Term Professor in IP Law, and a Distinguished Teaching Scholar. Much of her research addresses the intersection of trade secrets with employment law and/or technology, as well as the interplay between intellectual property, government policy, and innovation. Eid Al-Adha Celebration

The Islamic Law Association sponsored an Eid Al-Adha celebration on September 14 in the law school atrium. Attendees learned about the observance of Eid Al-Adha, the second of two Muslim holidays taking place after the pilgrimage to Mecca. Participants learned about the traditions surrounding the holiday and were able to sample authentic food for the occasion.

A few years ago, Ujala Akram LL.M. ’07, had a discussion with a few other IU McKinney alumni about how much they valued the legal education they had received.

The conversation led to the founding of an online, legal education project called the Sir William Blackstone Institute of Law in 2013, which offered free, online legal education lectures and access to Northumbria University and the University of London’s Bachelor of Laws (LL.B.) online degree programs.

In 2017, Akram became the founding dean of Blackstone School of Law in her native Lahore, Pakistan. The new school is an outgrowth of the online institute and, through Akram’s relationship with IU McKinney, will also offer its top students an opportunity to be selected for enrollment as partial scholarship students in McKinney’s LL.M. degree program.

“Our mission is to create 21st-century lawyers who are ready to be an effective part of the legal workforce,” Akram said.

Other faculty include Dr. Mohamed Arafa ’13, who will be teaching in person and online, and Tatiana Obando ’07, also teaching online.

“Being an alum and a former employee of IU McKinney, it is truly gratifying to have this relationship with McKinney Law—a law school that is not only known for its academic excellence but that also provides the best experience to international students,” Akram said.

For an LL.M. degree, Blackstone School of Law’s students will complete one semester at IU McKinney in Indianapolis and then return to Pakistan. In addition to taking classroom courses, students will also participate in a law clinic at the school to gain hands-on legal experience.

Akram discovered her passion for higher education as a student at McKinney, when she became involved with Professor Frank Emmert’s grant from USAID-Egypt to offer a McKinney LL.M. degree at program sites in Cairo and Alexandria. After serving as senior advisor for graduate programs at McKinney, Akram went on to work at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, California, then to Santa Clara University where she was most recently assistant dean.

“McKinney values its close and ongoing relationship with our alumni,” said Karen E. Bravo, Professor of Law and Associate Dean for Graduate Studies. “We welcome the opportunity to work with them in their future professional endeavors, including this exciting new project to bring legal education reform to our alum’s home countries.”

Daniel Griffith, ‘90, Presents First Graduate Studies Lecture of Fall 2016 Semester

Daniel Griffith, ‘90, presented the first lecture of the Fall 2016 semester for the Graduate Studies Lecture Series. The event took place on September 15 at Inlow Hall. His talk was titled, “Models for Conflict Resolution, Dialogue, and Civil Discourse: The Lawyer’s Guide to Other Ways to Settle Disputes.”

Griffith has an extensive background in conflict resolution, mediation, and the facilitation of dialogue processes. He is director of the IUPUI Office for Intergroup Dialogue and Civil Community, which directs programs and initiatives focused on facilitating dialogues, public forums and other communication processes involving issues of social identity, social justice and civil discourse. An attorney and mediator, he specializes in mediating employment, management and higher education disputes as well as in training lawyers, HR professionals, and managers in mediation, negotiation, communication, and dialogue skills. He has taught graduate and undergraduate courses in negotiation and alternative dispute resolution, organizational leadership, diversity, conflict management, and human resources management. He is also a trainer for the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law Public Policy Mediation course. In addition, he is a co-author of The Conflict Survival Kit: Tools for Resolving Conflict at Work (2nd ed.) and the Supervisor Survival Kit (11th ed.).

2016 Hall Center/INDIANA HEALTH LAW REVIEW Symposium Examines What Works (and Doesn’t) in Health Policy

The topic for this year’s Hall Center for Law and Health/INDIANA HEALTH LAW REVIEW Symposium was, “Ideology Meets Reality: What Works and What Doesn’t Work in Health Policy.” The “packed house” event took place October 21 in the Inlow Hall Wynne Courtroom and atrium. Health law students, faculty from across campus, and alumni took part in the program.

The event took place at a crucial time as the nation faced a variety of critical health concerns, says Professor David Orentlicher, co-director of the Hall Center for Law and Health at IU McKinney and one of the organizers of the event. “In the past, elected officials often have adopted policies that exacerbate rather than solve serious health problems,” Professor Orentlicher said. “In large part, this has happened because policy is driven by ideology rather than science. In this symposium, our speakers discussed which policies work and which don’t work for key issues in health, including health threats such as the Zika virus, abuse of prescription drugs such as Oxycodone, and the challenge of ensuring universal access to affordable health care.”

Among the cutting-edge topics addressed were:

• “From [A]nthrax to [Z]ika: Key Lessons in Public Health Legal Preparedness,” presented by Professor James G. Hodge, Jr., Professor of Public Health Law and Ethics, Director of the Public Health Law and Policy Program, and Director of the Western Region of the Network for Public Health Law at the Arizona State University Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law.
• “Ideology Meets Reality: What Works and What Doesn’t in Patient Cost Sharing,” presented by Professor Christopher Robertson, Associate Dean for Research and Innovation at The University of Arizona James E. Rogers College of Law. Professor Anne Royalty, Director of IUPUI’s Center for Health Economics Research was the commenter.
• “Measuring the New Health Care Federalism,” presented by Professor Abbe R. Gluck, Faculty Director of the Solomon Center for Health Law and Policy at Yale Law School and Professor Nicole Huberfeld, Associate Dean of Academic Affairs at the University of Kentucky College of Law. Professor Diana R.H. Winters of IU McKinney was the commenter.
• “The Affordable Care Act: What are Its Aims and How Do We Assess Whether They Are Met?” presented by Professor Kosali Simon of the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at IU-Bloomington.
• “Patient Surveillance and the Public’s Health: Revisiting the Law of Unintended Consequences in the Age of the Opioid Crisis,” presented by Professor Leo Beletsky of Northeastern University School of Law and Bouve College of Health. The commenter for this discussion was

Terry, Professor Kosali Simon, Professor David Orentlicher, Professor Diana R.H. Winters, Professor Richard S. Hall Center Grand Rounds Event Focuses on Acclarent Settlement

Two attorney experts in the area of health law policy and regulation discussed the impact of the Acclarent settlement during the first Hall Center Grand Rounds event of the Fall 2016 semester. The program, “The Acclarent Settlement: Lessons Learned,” took place at IU McKinney on October 6 and featured speakers Norman Tabler, Jr. and Suzanne O’Shea.

California-based medical device manufacturer Acclarent Inc., a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, agreed to pay $18 million to resolve allegations that the company caused health care providers to submit false claims to Medicare and other federal health care programs by marketing and distributing its sinus spacer product for use as a drug delivery device without U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval of that use.

The settlement illustrates the government’s heightened emphasis on combating health care fraud. Tabler and O’Shea discussed the topic from the perspective of their individual expertise. O’Shea is a director at Navigant Consulting, where she leads the FDA Regulatory Pharmaceutical practice. She was regulatory counsel at the FDA for over two decades, serving in the Center for Drug Evaluation and Research, the Office of the Chief Mediator and Ombudsman, and the Office of Combination Products. Tabler is Counsel at Faegre Baker Daniels. He joined the firm upon graduation from Columbia Law School. In addition to 25 years’ experience with the firm (including serving as the first chair of the health law practice), he was Indiana University Health’s general counsel for 16 years. In the photo from left are Professor Terry, O’Shea, and Tabler.

Professor Ross Silverman of the IU Fairbanks School of Public Health and IU McKinney.

• “Conflicts of Interest in the New Era of Sunshine: What We Know and What We Still Need to Know,” presented by Professor Richard S. Saver, the Arch T. Allen Distinguished Professor at the University of North Carolina School of Law. The commenter for this session was Paul Helft of the IU School of Medicine and Director of the Charles Warren Fairbanks Center for Medical Ethics.

“The event allows students to engage with distinguished faculty on current health law issues,” said INDIANA HEALTH LAW REVIEW Editor-in-Chief Tyler Lemen, a 3L at IU McKinney. “The topic of this year’s symposium provided attendees with scholarly views on health policy at a time when national opinions are shifting.”

“The INDIANA HEALTH LAW REVIEW Symposium provides an ideal venue for exploration of the complex fields of health law and policy,” said Amy Elson, Assistant Director of the Hall Center for Law and Health. “It allows us to connect leading scholars with the students and faculty of the IU McKinney School of Law, students and faculty from the IUPUI campus, and attorneys from Indianapolis’ vibrant health and life sciences sectors.”
Impact of Affordable Care Act Examined During Hall Center Grand Rounds Event

While the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act has made health care accessible to more Americans than ever before, the need to control health care expenditures remains a daunting challenge. Professor Zack Buck of the University of Tennessee College of Law discussed his scholarship in this area during a talk titled “Furthering the Fiduciary Metaphor” on November 3. His presentation was part of the Hall Center for Law and Health Grand Rounds lecture series at IU McKinney.

“We are lucky to benefit from Professor Buck’s expertise in addressing this timely topic,” said Professor Nicolas Terry, executive director of the Hall Center. “As the laboratory of reimbursement ideas rumbles along, it is important to try different approaches and his work on fiduciary relationship is fascinating.”

Professor Terry Testifies About Health Care Apps Before Congressional Committee

Professor Nicolas Terry testified before Congress’s Energy and Commerce subcommittee about issues related to health care apps. Professor Terry offered his testimony on July 13.

Testimony surrounded much of Professor Terry’s recent scholarship on mobile health technology and the lack of privacy protections in place for consumers.

“In my opinion federal data protection law that obviates the gaps between our commercial sectors and protects health information wherever it happens to reside is overdue and a necessary precondition for the full embrace of disruptive health apps by both medical professionals and consumers,” Professor Terry said in his testimony. Congresswoman Susan Brooks, ’85, was a member of the subcommittee that heard the testimony.

News of the testimony was part of the Politico Morning eHealth report, the website Mobi Health News, and The Hill on July 13. Video of the conference can be found on YouTube. (Professor Terry’s prepared testimony begins at 1:11 in the YouTube video, the question and answer session he takes part in begins at 1:28, and Congresswoman Susan Brooks’ remarks begin at 1:50.)

In addition, Professor Terry spoke about the testimony with a reporter for BNA Bloomberg and its Health Care Report, which was published July 19. Professor Terry notes that most American consumers of health-care mobile apps don’t realize that the same privacy protections that apply to their relationships with doctors don’t apply to their use of apps.

Professor Terry, in the photo at right, spoke with Congresswoman Brooks, ’85, after the testimony.

Professor Terry is the Hall Render Professor of Law and executive director of the Hall Center for Law and Health. He was invited by the White House to take part in the Precision Medicine Initiative Summit in February 2016. He also is a member of the Health IT Consumer Workgroup. His research interests lie primarily at the intersection of medicine, law, and information technology. His recent scholarship has dealt with health privacy, social media and health, big data, and health care fragmentation. He started the podcast, “The Week in Health Law” with Professor Frank Pasquale of the University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law. The podcast is available for download at iTunes, and PodBean, and can be listened to at Stitcher Radio. He is one of the permanent bloggers at HealthLawProf and at Harvard Law School’s Bill of Health. His recent publications are available on the Social Science Research Network, and he can be followed on Twitter @nicolasterry.
Annual Fall CLE Event Features Experts on Regulation and Ethics in Health Law

The Annual Fall Continuing Legal Education Program at IU McKinney considered the topic “Regulating Innovation: Best Practices and Ethics in Health Law” during the event on October 11 at Inlow Hall.

Alice Fisher from the Washington, D.C., office of the firm Latham & Watkins presented on “The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act” to begin the event. Fisher focuses her practice on global white collar criminal investigations, including a range of government enforcement matters.

Faegre Baker Daniels attorneys Jessica Cox from the Indianapolis office and Joe Price from the Minneapolis office offered a discussion of “Biosimilars: Liability Issues.” Cox concentrates her practice on the defense of pharmaceutical companies, device manufacturers and other industry leaders involved in product liability litigation. Price focuses exclusively in the area of complex litigation, mass tort and class action products liability defense, especially litigation involving pharmaceuticals and medical devices.

Patrick Raulerson, Senior Regulatory Counsel in the FDA’s Center for Drug Evaluation and Research’s Office of Regulatory Policy; and Dave Ceryak, Senior Director – Assistant General Counsel, Regulatory Legal Team at Eli Lilly and Company talked about “Biosimilars: Regulatory Issues.” Raulerson works on a wide range of legal and policy matters related to biosimilars, abuse-deterrent opioids, combination products, and medical gases. Ceryak leads the team that counsels on drug and device matters, including clinical development, registration, Hatch-Waxman, biosimilars, good manufacturing practices, diagnostics, and drug safety.

Josh Minkler, the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Indiana, addressed the topic, “Issues Surrounding the DOJ’s ‘Yates Memo.’” He has been an assistant U. S. Attorney for the Southern District of Indiana since 1994. He was appointed by the U.S. District Court to serve as U.S. Attorney in 2015.

Professor James Dimitri of IU McKinney presented, “Legal Writing in the Electronic Age.” He has written and spoken about teaching legal writing, appellate advocacy, and persuasion. He also has spoken on the topics of intergenerational theory and the use of technology in teaching.

Mike Witte, ’82, Executive Secretary of the Indiana Disciplinary Commission, presented the “Indiana Ethics Update.” Prior to joining the Commission, Witte’s 25-year judicial career includes serving as judge pro tem in Wayne Superior Court 1, Judge of the Dearborn Superior Court 1, and Judge of the Dearborn County Court. His teaching experience is primarily in legal ethics, impaired driving, and traffic court administration.

Proceeds from the event fund scholarships for IU McKinney students. The event was established in 2001, and as of the Fall of 2016, nearly $250,000 has been raised for scholarships.

Eight students in IU McKinney’s newest clinic act as the voice for children in the Marion County child welfare system, while at the same time learning by doing.

The Child Advocacy Law Clinic, the 10th and most recent offering in the school’s clinical program, was launched in the Fall 2016 semester. Second- and third-year law students work with Child Advocates, the court appointed special advocate (CASA) agency for Marion County. The agency represents and protects the best interests of children who are suffering life-threatening abuse or neglect.

“It’s great to get out of the classroom and into the real world,” said clinic student Julie DeVoe. She’s a 2L in the day program at IU McKinney. “I was excited about an opportunity to work directly with children and their families in a role that serves such an important purpose.”

Students interact with their child clients, other parties, and in the courtroom. Classroom sessions focus heavily on legal issues faced by children in the child welfare system including immigration, family law, juvenile delinquency, education law, and rights to privacy among other topics.

The clinic was established following discussions that commenced in 2015. Cindy Booth, ‘91, executive director of Child Advocates, Carey Haley Wong, ’02, chief counsel at the organization, and Nicole Goodson with Disability Legal Services, who also serves as a guardian ad litem at Child Advocates, met with Professors Joel Schumm, Carrie Hagan, and Vice Dean Antony Page to discuss the need for such a clinic. Within a year, it became a reality.

“The clinic is exceeding our expectations!” Wong said. “We have been so fortunate to have an amazing and dedicated group of students for the first semester of the program.”

Goodson agreed. “The students enrolled in the clinic have shown a great level of understanding of the law and dedication to advocating for children’s rights,” she said. “Additionally, everyone at the juvenile court has welcomed our students with open arms and done all they can to make sure the students are receiving a rich educational experience.”

As part of the class, all of the clinic students were sworn in as guardians ad litem by Magistrate Jennifer Hubbart, ’94, who serves in the Marion County Juvenile Court.

Serving as a guardian ad litem has been eye-opening for McKinney 3L Betsy Huffman. She’s a former middle and high school English teacher who has always been interested in helping children. Huffman is in the law school’s evening division and works part-time as a law clerk at the Indiana State Personnel Department. “The clinic has taught me about balancing competing interests—those of the Department of Child Services, the child, the parents—and how many children are part of the legal system, through no fault of their own,” Huffman said. “Guardians ad litem have an important job in making sure the courts hear from or at least about the children’s wishes. This clinic has shown how easy it is for the adults’ concerns to overshadow the children’s and why it is important for the GAL program to exist.”

Members of IU McKinney’s Black Law Students Association (BLSA) organized a job and resource fair for formerly incarcerated individuals. The “New Beginnings” job fair, attended by more than 20 employers and over 150 participants, was held April 8, 2016, at the Julia M. Carson Government Center in Indianapolis.

“The job fair was very successful!” said BLSA president LaTonja Anderson. In addition to the attendees and employers, over 50 law students, attorneys, professors, and community leaders volunteered at the event. Employers at the fair represented companies in the food service and construction industries, among others. In addition to jobs, information on expungement, child support services, license reinstatement, and a resume workshop were offered to participants.

Addressing re-entry was a primary focus for the student group during the 2015-16 academic year. The job fair was the second of BLSA’s re-entry programs. In November 2015, the group hosted a holiday party for formerly incarcerated people and their families, at which participants were able to reconnect with family over games, food, and learn more about the job fair BLSA was planning. The efforts have been led by Mariah McGhee, who was chair of BLSA’s Community Service Programs.

BLSA students take part in another project that dovetails with their New Beginnings efforts. Project Life is a program whose mission is to educate youth and their families about the problems, issues and consequences created by acts of violence and guns. Participants in Project Life are juveniles who have been charged with gun violations or violations for possessing dangerous weapons. BLSA’s role in this program, Anderson said, “is to act as a resource and or mentor to these participants who for the most part are African American males.”

“These efforts will definitely continue to be a focus of BLSA,” Anderson said. “BLSA’s mission is to bring about meaningful legal and political change that addresses the needs and concerns of the African American community, and recidivism is a major issue in the African American community.”

Call to the Profession 2016

Orientation activities for the incoming class of 2019 culminated with the Call to the Profession on Saturday, August 20, 2016. Following a welcome from Dean Andy Klein, the Honorable Jane Magnus-Stinson, ‘83, Judge, U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, and the Honorable Denise LaRue, ‘89, Magistrate Judge, U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, provided remarks. Following the talks, Judge Magnus-Stinson led the students in the Oath of Professionalism. Nissa Ricafort, ‘99, welcomed students to the school on behalf of the Indianapolis Bar Association. The IBA sponsored a reception for the students and their guests following the ceremony.

Resource Fair Provides Information to Students

On August 30, the law school hosted a resource fair for students to acquaint them with the many support organizations available to them as students. Representatives from school, campus and community legal organizations took part in the event, including the Indiana State Bar Association, the IUPUI Student Health Service and the Judges and Lawyers Assistance Program (JLAP) just to name a few. The Student Bar Association and a variety of student organizations were present as well, such as the Family Law Society, the Black Law Students Association and the Asian Law Society. There was something for everyone and hundreds of students took advantage of the opportunity to learn more about the offerings available.
Four faculty experts at the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law talked about recent United States Supreme Court cases in commemoration of Constitution Day. The event took place on September 16 at the law school and was attended by approximately 100 students, alumni, and friends of the school.

Professor Cynthia Adams, ’83, discussed Utah v. Strieff, a case relating to the Fourth Amendment. Prior to joining the faculty, Professor Adams practiced law with an Indianapolis law firm, specializing in general corporate law, acquisitions and mergers, commercial loans, and trusts and estates.

Professor Nicholas Georgakopoulos talked about the swing votes of justices. He is an author, with Professor Frank Sullivan, Jr., and Dimitri Georgakopoulos, of an article on judicial coalitions and their impact on court decisions.

Professor David Orentlicher discussed Whole Women’s Health v. Hellerstedt, a case related to reproductive rights. In addition to being the co-director of the William S. and Christine S. Hall Center for Law and Health and the Samuel R. Rosen Professor of Law, he is an adjunct professor of medicine at the IU School of Medicine.

Professor Carlton Waterhouse talked about the equal protection case, Fisher v. Texas. Professor Waterhouse is known internationally for his research and writing on reparations for historic injustices and state human rights violations. He currently serves as a member of the Indiana Advisory Committee to the United States Civil Rights Commission, and serves as the director of IU McKinney’s Environmental Energy and Natural Resources Law Program.

Thirty-eight participants took part in the second Summer Law and Leadership Academy at the IU McKinney Law. The program, which is organized by Assistant Dean Chasity Thompson, ’02, and Professor Shawn Boyne, took place June 13-18 at Inlow Hall.

Faculty who participated in the program include Amy Elson, assistant director of the Hall Center for Law and Health; Jennifer Mahoney, interim director of the University Writing Center at IUPUI; and Professors Lahny Silva; Frank Sullivan, Jr.; Nicolas Terry, Carlton Waterhouse, and Fran Watson, ’80. Students were introduced to law school coursework, and had the opportunity to meet with attorneys working in a variety of areas in the legal and business communities. They also participated in law-related field trips, and took part in a mock trial. The experience is designed to introduce undergraduate students from historically underrepresented backgrounds to law school and the career opportunities available with a law degree.
Faculty News

Cynthia Baker presented two sets of remarks at the 2016 Program on Law and State Government Fellowship Symposium, Lessons from Flint on the Capacities and Limits of State Government: “Two Fellows, One Year, A Million Ideas” and “How Relevant are State Governments in Times of Crisis?” The first set of remarks explored the concepts of crisis, irony, and humility in light of the events leading up to high concentrations of lead in the drinking water supplied to the citizens of Flint, Michigan after the city, operating under Michigan’s Emergency Manager Law, changed the source of the city’s drinking water to the Flint River. The latter set of remarks posited that state governments remain unique democratic vehicles of power and wealth and that lawyers need to understand the law behind cities’ and states’ abilities to attend to all of the people who live within their respective boundaries. In October, Baker had the honor of carrying Indiana’s Bicentennial Torch for Hamilton County, Indiana as a part of the state’s bicentennial celebration. In so doing, she joined hundreds of other torchbearers as a part of the six-week event that took place in all of Indiana’s 92 counties and covered over 3,000 miles. Professor Baker continued to serve, along with Professor Max Huffman, as co-chair of the school’s ABA Reaccreditation Committee including helping to host the ABA Site Team during its visit to the school on October 23-26.

James Dimitri spoke at two conferences hosted by the Indiana State Bar Association in June, both of which touched upon electronic filing. Professor Dimitri spoke on a panel on June 2 as part of the bar association’s Solo and Small Firm Conference. He spoke about Indiana courts’ electronic filing initiative with Indiana Court of Appeals Judge Edward Najam, and Bob Rath, ’06, director of technology for Indiana’s appellate courts. Professor Dimitri spoke on June 13 for the bar association’s Appellate Practice Skills Conference on a panel about formatting appellate briefs in the digital age. His fellow panelists were Indiana Court of Appeals Judges Paul Mathias and Terry Crone, and Barnes & Thornburg partner John Maley, ’88. At both conferences, Professor Dimitri spoke about using good typography and document-design principles to enhance the readability of digital briefs.

Mark Shaw, ’72, Publishes Book about Dorothy Kilgallen

Mark Shaw, ‘72, has written a new book, The Reporter Who Knew Too Much about media personality Dorothy Kilgallen. The book, which is Shaw’s 25th, is published by New York City-based Post Hill Press.

Dorothy Kilgallen was a noted author, journalist, and television personality who died in 1965. Shaw’s work examines the circumstances surrounding her death. Kilgallen was known at the time for her reporting skills, and for her appearances on the television game show What’s My Line? She was writing a tell-all book about the John F. Kennedy assassination at the time of her death, which was listed as an overdose.

“Many of my books deal with the subject of ‘justice denied,’” Shaw said. “I was drawn to writing a biography of Kilgallen because when she died under mysterious circumstances following an 18-month probe of the JFK assassination, there was no investigation despite real questions about the death scene being staged.” Shaw also recalled an individual that he was interviewing for a previous book telling him that an attorney said “They’ve killed Dorothy,” shortly after Kilgallen died. “I couldn’t get that quote out of my mind,” Shaw said. “My intent is to provide Kilgallen, a remarkable woman who was once called the “most powerful female voice in America” by the New York Post, her day in court, so to speak, providing her with the justice she richly deserves as a journalist killed in the line of duty for simply seeking the truth.”

Shaw’s background includes six years as a criminal defense attorney in Indiana. He also practiced entertainment law in Los Angeles and Indianapolis. He moved to Aspen, Colorado, in the late 1970s, and co-founded the Aspen Daily News. Shaw also became a correspondent for the morning television show Good Morning America during this time. In 2008, he earned a master’s degree in theological studies from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, California, with a specialized interest in spiritual conversion and religious art. Shaw remains a member of the bar in California and Indiana. He also is a legal analyst for ABC, ESPN, and USA Today.

“Not a day goes by that my law degree isn’t a vital part of either my research or my writing of the books,” Shaw said of his legal education at IU McKinney. “I am blessed to have received excellent training in the nuances of the law but perhaps more importantly, the professors instilled in me a curiosity to seek out injustice wherever it exists.”

Shaw will be speaking at the law school at 4:00 p.m. on Wednesday, April 5. He will discuss his career and the new book. To register for the event, go to the law school website: mckinneylaw.iu.edu

Seth Thomas, ’05, to Work with International Justice Mission
Seth Thomas, ’05, has left Indianapolis and his law practice behind for a year to move to the Philippines with his family. Thomas will work as a legal fellow with the International Justice Mission, advising Filipino prosecutors who prosecute cybersex-trafficking cases and design a system to sort through the 6,000 tips per month regarding possible child cybertrafficking. A story about the work Thomas will be doing appeared in the December 22 issue of the Indianapolis Star.

The family moved in mid-January to begin the work. Thomas, a summa cum laude graduate, said in the story that he believes most people enter law school with a desire to bring justice. “I always wanted to be a lawyer,” Thomas said during a discussion about the article and his upcoming move. “I think most of my friends and classmates at McKinney were motivated by those issues. As lawyers, we can create rules that help people live together better.” He first learned about the Mission’s work during law school, and was reacquainted with the group through his church, Traders Point Christian Church. The church is actively supporting the family in their work, Thomas said.

Thomas and his family will blog about the work they’re doing at seekinghisjustice.com.

Dean Emeritus William F. Harvey

Dean Emeritus and Carl M. Gray Professor of Law Emeritus William F. Harvey passed away on November 17, 2016, at the age of 84. Dean Harvey joined the faculty of the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law in 1968, and served as dean from 1973 to 1979. Following his deanship, he returned to full-time teaching until 1996 when he retired.

“I was deeply saddened to learn of Dean Harvey’s passing,” said IU McKinney Law Dean Andrew R. Klein. “He was widely recognized as a leader in our legal community and a devoted mentor to his students. I know that he had a great love for our law school, which he served for so many years. A five-time recipient of the law school’s Black Cane Award for Outstanding Teaching, he was held in high esteem by generations of McKinney Law students. I know that he will be greatly missed by his former colleagues and students alike.”

Vice President Mike Pence, ’86, is one of Dean Harvey’s former students. “Professor Bill Harvey was a personal mentor of mine and an intellectual giant who, throughout his distinguished career, garnered the respect and admiration of his peers, colleagues and students,” Vice President Pence said in a statement. “His awards and recognitions were numerous, and his body of work will serve as a guide for those studying the law for generations to come.”

Upon learning of the passing of his former professor, Adam Arceneaux, ’93, said, “Professor Harvey was the absolute best teacher I was fortunate enough to have at any level of my educational career. He took a genuine interest in his students and had a passion for training and inspiring us to become great lawyers and advocates. I am still striving to meet his high standards.” Arceneaux, who is a partner at Ice Miller LLP, continued, “Every time I draft a motion, or set foot in court, I have Professor Harvey to thank for giving me an understanding of jurisdiction and the rules of civil procedure—not just the ‘what’ and the ‘how,’ but, more importantly, the ‘why.’”

Greg Garrison, ’73, another of Dean Harvey’s former students, did a special tribute to his mentor on his WIBC 93.1 FM radio program on November 18, and former student, Deborah Daniels, ’77, managing partner at Krieg DeVault, wrote in honor of Dean Harvey for the Indianapolis Business Journal on December 10.

Dean Harvey received his undergraduate degree from the University of Missouri and then joined the U.S. Navy, serving in both Korea and Indochina. After leaving the military, he attended Georgetown University School of Law where he received his J.D. degree and his LL.M. While in law school, he was a member of the GEORGETOWN LAW REVIEW.

He worked in the Antitrust Division of the U. S. Department of Justice while still a student and then clerked for the Honorable Thomas D. Quinn, on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. He also worked for Chief Judge Leo A. Rover, on that court. After receiving his LL.M., he was the law clerk to the Honorable John A. Danaher on the U. S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit and also worked for the Honorable Warren E. Burger, who later became the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

He was a professor of law at the Washburn University Law School in Topeka, Kansas, where he collaborated with his law student and friend Dr. M. Martin Haley, a cardiac surgeon, to develop the first widely used legal and medical definition for determining whether a person is legally considered dead. Their work was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, and elsewhere.

In 1968, Professor Harvey joined the faculty of Indiana University at what was then the Indiana University School of Law-Indianapolis. He served as dean from 1973-1979, stepping down to become the school’s first titled professor, the Carl M. Gray Professor of Law. He formally retired in 1996.

He received the Black Cane Award for best professor (chosen by the student body) multiple times throughout his career at IU. For 10 years he was also a member of Indiana University’s Rhodes and Marshall Scholarship Committee.

For over two decades, he served on the Indiana Supreme Court’s Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure and lectured in the Indiana Bar Review course. He also lectured at the Defense Information School of the U. S. Department of Defense, and presented numerous Continuing Legal Educational programs. He was admitted to practice in Indiana, Virginia, the District of Columbia, and Kansas. He was an active member of the Indiana State Bar Association.

Professor Harvey was a prolific writer of casebooks, as well as articles and columns, and was well known for his strong support of the Indianapolis Legal Aid Society, where he served as a member of the board of directors for more than 35 years.

President Reagan appointed him to be a member of the Advisory Committee on Accreditation of Colleges and Universities to the U. S. Secretary of Education, and to be Chairman of the Board of Directors of the national Legal Services Corporation. In 1985, President Reagan selected him for nomination to the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in Chicago, Illinois, although he was never confirmed.

In the 1996, Governor Evan Bayh of Indiana appointed him as a Sagamore of the Wabash, one of the highest honors bestowed in the State of Indiana.

An avid history buff, he was a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Society of Descendants of Washington’s Army at Valley Forge, and the United States Naval Institute.

He is survived by Gerry, his wife of 60 years, and their children, Carolyn Harvey Lundberg and Dr. William L.F. Harvey, as well as six grandchildren.

A memorial resolution on behalf of Dean Harvey was adopted by the IUPUI Faculty Council at their meeting on January 10, 2017.

Bailey was a partner at the law firm Bose McKinney & Evans, where he was responsible for litigating and negotiating the middle and final phases of school desegregation. He retired from the firm in 2012.

Bailey served as chair of the board of the public defenders agency for 15 years. He received the Marion County Prosecutor’s Office Distinguished Service Award, was named an honorary Deputy Chief of the Indianapolis Police Department, and has been named to the Indiana State Bar Association Pro Bono Hall of Fame numerous times, among other honors.

At Ball State, he was President of both his freshman and senior classes. He was a member of the national honor society, Blue Key, and the social fraternity Sigma Chi. Following graduation, he joined the U.S. Army as a sergeant, then returned to Indianapolis to work for the Indiana Department of Education.

Bailey attended the evening division of the Indiana University Robert McKinney School of Law, receiving the J.D. degree, cum laude in 1975. He was inducted into the international legal honor society, Phi Alpha Delta. Also in 1975, Mr. Bailey was admitted to practice in Indiana and before the U.S. District Court, Southern District of Indiana.

On Wednesday, April 13, the annual Spirit of Philanthropy Award luncheon took place at the Indiana Roof Ballroom in Downtown Indianapolis. Awards were presented to individuals whose philanthropic efforts support the schools on the IUPUI campus.

“These gifts play an important role in the success of IUPUI,” said IUPUI Chancellor Nasser H. Paydar. “The spirit of philanthropy creates a legacy of opportunity, enables dreams to be achieved and supports innovation across Indiana.”

The IU McKinney School of Law honorees were Michael D., ‘72, and Nancie L. Freeborn. Michael has been a member of the school’s Board of Visitors since 1999. The couple are both longtime advocates for the school. They recently established the Michael and Nancie L. Freeborn Civil and Human Rights Fellowship, which provides experiential learning opportunities for IU McKinney students interested in civil and human rights.

Shown in the photo are IU McKinney Law Dean Andy Klein, Nancie Freeborn, Michael D. Freeborn, ‘72, and IUPUI Chancellor Nasser H. Paydar.

The Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law is grateful for the philanthropic support we receive from our dedicated alumni. Thank you for making an investment in today’s students—just as former generations made an investment in you to help make your legal education possible.

Giving totals include gifts, pledge payments, and matching gifts received by the IU Foundation between July 1, 2015 and June 30, 2016. On behalf of our current and future students—we offer a heartfelt thank you. Those donors requesting not to be publically recognized are not listed.

CLASS AGENTS 2015-2016

Thank you to the 2015-2016 Class Agents who reached out to their fellow IU McKinney Law classmates to encourage them to give back to our alma mater and stay connected with the school. Are you interested in becoming a Class Agent? Please contact Amy Whitlock, Assistant Director of Advancement at amynwhit@iu.edu or 317-278-4477.
