We at Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law in Indianapolis look forward to hiring a full-time clinical-track professor. Our new professor will teach the first-year Legal Communication and Analysis course, a graded course worth two credits each semester.

The writing faculty at IU McKinney School of Law have 405(c) status and participate in all aspects of the law school community, with the exception of voting on the hiring and retention of tenure track professors. Our benefits presently include a generous professional development fund and up to 400 hours in paid research assistance. We may also teach in the summer or apply for a summer research grant. We have been fortunate to be ranked among the top writing programs listed in the U.S. News & World Report for the last decade.

This position begins on August 1, 2018. Applicants must have a juris doctorate degree from an accredited law school, excellent writing and analytical skills, and a strong academic record with experience in law practice or a judicial clerkship. Prior teaching experience and publications are preferred.
